THE PRINCE OF WALES might learn something from Mrs. Coolidge. On his thirty-third birthday he and his brothe went to a costume ball dressed as Eton schoolboys.

That will not please Britons that like to take their royalty seriously. Henry the Eighth, predecessor of King George, at the age of twelve, wrote letters to Erasmus and others that amaze you. Perhaps he didn't really write them, but he signed them. Royalty that wishes to be taken seriously must take itself seriously.

MRS. COOLIDGE, in South Dakota, sees women of all kinds, young girls and grand mothers, wearing knickerbockers Mrs. Coolidge respects them and probably admires their common sense, but she will not wear knickerbockers. Rubber boots when she goes fishing and a skirt Please Turn to Page 4, Column 6

PULLMAN CAR THIEVES LOOT POCKETBOOKS ON HUB-BAR HARBOR TRAIN

Bangor, Me., June 25 (A.P.).—Professional Pullman car thieves on the Boston to Bar Harbor and Calais train last night are believed to have obtained several thousand dollars.

When the train arrived here early today it was learned that the money was taken from pocketbooks, five of which were left open and rifled of their contents on the floor of the women's compartment.

The thieves, who are believed to have boarded the train at Boston, worked quietly sometime after midnight. The thefts were not discovered until a woman passenger getting up to leave the train at a station west of here saw the open pocketbooks.

It is believed the thieves left the train immediately after obtaining all the loot they could find without awakening the sleeping passengers. It is also believed they had a woman accomplice.

In a pocketbook belonging to Mrs. George B. Hassey of Calais, widow of the late Justice Hasmon of the Maine Supreme bench, a check for $190 was not disturbed.

Last night's train is carried an unusually heavy mail and express list, two extra Pullman cars being attached to accommodate passengers bound for Bar Harbor points in Washington county and in New Brunswick.

STARS OF FILMS WILL FIGHT CUT IN SALARIES

Hollywood, Cal., June 25 (A.P.).—Threats of determined opposition to the salary slashes in the motion picture industry which were announced recently by sixteen principal producers, have developed among contract players.

These were to be asked, the producers announced, to consent to the 10 to 25 per cent. salary reduction which will be made mandatory for all non-contract players.

Paramount called twenty directors into a conference and Jesse Lasky, executive vice-president, made the request for the voluntary salary cut. One director's absence was taken to indicate he would refuse, one director was reported to have refused at the conference and two others replied they would take it under advisement. The other directors accepted.

Several highly paid stars intimated that they would not accept the slash. They declined to have their names be published in connection with their hint.

Persons familiar with the film colony undercurrent say it is asserted that they expected the most determined opposition to come from the film luminaries, some of whom they said evidently would welcome the opportunity of breaking existing contracts through their refusals. The observers pointed out that many of these, were sentenced to from their long term contracts to other jobs.

WOMAN MUST HANG FOR SLAYING IN ILLINOIS

Chicago, June 25 (A.P.).—Mrs. Catherine Cassler of Crown Point, Ind., today was sentenced to be hanged on October 21 for the murder of William Lindstrom.

Mrs. Lillian Fraser, who was known as Lindstrom's wife, and Lowa Patrick, who confessed their parts in the plot to kill Lindstrom for the collection of $7,500 insurance, were sentenced to life imprisonment.

BYRD'S PARIS HOP AGAIN HALTED BY STORM JINX

New York, June 25 (A.P.).—The weather man, unofficial starter for Commander Richard E. Byrd's projected flight to Paris, held the giant tri-motored Fokker monoplane America at its mark today, with every possibility that it would not take off before Sunday or Monday.

Weather conditions between New York and Newfoundland are still unsettled, Dr. James H. Kimball, head of the Weather Bureau, has informed Commander Byrd.

As soon as the weather man reports favorable conditions, the monoplane can be made ready for the flight within a short time, Commander Byrd said.

If Commander Byrd wings his way to Paris within the next 36 hours, he will be able to receive radio cast by a dozen ships, which will be in the steamer lanes, Herbert W. Saxman, former navigating officer of the Leviathan, reported.

HOAX LEADS TO RELEASE OF ROYALIST LEADER

Paris, June 25 (A.P.).—Leon Daudet, Royalist leader, who was imprisoned June 17 to serve a term for libel, was mysteriously released from prison today as the result, it is stated, of a hoax on the prefecture of police.

Daudet's associates, M. Delonclet and Secretary-General Bernard of the Communist Party also were released

"KIDNAPER" DISBARRED

FIGURES IN BRESNAHAN CASE

Mrs. Mary E. Fisher and her son, Wilbur McK. Fisher, whose kidnaping led to jail term for Stephen C. Bresnahan, disbarred today with Henry Hogan, who is serving time for not paying over to client money awarded latter in a court suit.

BOTH ON JAIL RECORDS; ONE KEPT HIS CLIENT'S CASH; OTHER 'KIDNAPER'

Henry Hogan and Stephen C. Bresnahan were disbarred as attorneys in Massachusetts today by Judge Crosby of the Supreme Court on motion of Gilbert A. A. Pevey, chairman of the committee of grievances of the Middlesex Bar Association.

Hogan, as counsel for Spiros A. Thomas against Edward W. Blodgett, collected a judgment of $1324.60 rendered in favor of Thomas and failed to pay the same to Thomas, although the latter repeatedly demanded what was due him.

Hogan was convicted of larceny and now is serving a sentence in the House of Correction at Cambridge.

Bresnahan was found guilty of kidnaping Wilbur M. Fisher after the Probate Court in divorce proceedings had decreed that the custody of the boy should be in his mother.

Bresnahan was counsel for the father and the kidnaping, which occurred at Roxbury, caused quite a sensation.

In April, 1926, Bresnahan was sentenced in the Superior Court at Boston to six months in the House of Correction, which sentence has since expired. Bresnahan also paid a fine of $500 ordered by the court.

GIRL SLAYER SUSPECT FLEES TRAP IN WOODS

Dover, N. H., June 25.—The man suspected of being George Taylor, sought for the murder of Stella Kiik at Salisbury Beach, June 9, who was surrounded in a patch of wood near here, today succeeded in evading the cordon of police and is again on the road. He was last seen heading for Rochester, Massachusetts State police set out in pursuit after a farmer in Strafford reported seeing him.

Massachusetts State Officers Delaney and McGrady with Deputy Sheriff Andrew McDaniels of Strafford were notified that the man they had supposedly surrounded in the woods was seen on the Rochester road. Levy Bussell, a farmer, reported that the man was carrying a bail and his description tallied with those already received by police.

U. S. REJECTS BRITISH 'BIGGER NAVY' DEMAND

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 25.—"The United States cannot and will not accept anything short of absolute parity with Great Britain in the matter of auxiliary naval ships."

This official announcement, made here today, by the American answer to the demand at Geneva by W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the British Admiralty, that Britain be accorded superior auxiliary naval tonnage over the United States.

Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, who heads the American delegation at the Geneva conference, has been given positive instructions to reject any such demand.

The manner of today's blunt announcement indicates clearly that the United States stands willing to let the Geneva conference go by the boards rather than accept any modification of the 5-5 naval ratio as be

HUB MILLIONAIRE TO WED CAMBRIDGE NURSE

Stanley E. Newton, wealthy Boston grain broker and yachtsman, twice married, father of four children and grandfather of one, has taken out intentions of marriage in Manchester, N. H., with Flora D. Mercier, a 27-year-old Cambridge nurse, it was learned today.

Newton was divorced by his second wife in Norfolk Probate Court. She received a decree from the hands of Judge McCool, Feb. 16, that will become absolute in August.

The Newton-Mercier romance had its inception during an illness of the aged millionaire when the girl acted as nurse.

12 SCIENTISTS SAIL TO NORTH WITH M'MILLAN

Wiscasset, Me., June 25 (A.P.).—The Rawson-MacMillan-Field Museum expedition to the Arctic starts today to carry twelve scientists on a fifteen months' trip to Labrador and Greenland.

Lieutenant-Commander Donald B. MacMillan, starting his eleventh voyage into the frozen north, declared his belief that the meteorological investigations the expedition is to undertake would prove of great value to aviation, particularly transatlantic flying. He said:

"This is the very thing that Lieutenant-Commander Byrd is waiting to obtain from weather officials and ships at sea to determine whether he can fly to Europe. The aviator depends so much on atmospheric conditions that the value of the station which we will construct at Kauk in Labrador ought to be great."

MacMillan recalled that Byrd had his first Arctic flying experience as a member of the 1925 expedition with the schooner Bowdoin and the steamer Peary a year before he made his successful flight to the North Pole and return.

TO STUDY ANCIENT RUINS.

He also expressed the belief that the study of Pueblo ruins which is to be undertaken under direction of Dr. Duncan Strong of Chicago, anthropologist for the Field Museum, might solve the secret of the strange race reputed to have settled among

Kale Girl Slayer Suspect Escapes Police Cordon

The police learned a circus had landed at Rochester and planned to visit that city. They will question the circus officials, acting on the theory that the suspect may try to get a job there. It is known that he was with a circus or carnival at one time.

As dawn broke, a large posse which had surrounded this piece of woodland many hours before, thus hemming the fugitive in, began its advance through the thick foliage and underbrush.

In an ever-narrowing circle the advance is continuing, and when the posse converges in the center of the woods, it is confidently expected that the fugitive will be captured.

The entire countryside has been aroused at the proximity of the fugitive and residents, especially the women are praying for his speedy capture.

Several residents of this town have seen the man within the last thirty-six hours, and in every particular he answers the description of the tramp barber of Salisbury Beach, save in one.

MUSTACHE GONE.

The mustache has disappeared, but police had expected that the suspect would shave it off. Incidentally the cap that the dancing barber, as he was called, wore when he appeared at Salisbury Beach has been replaced by a hat.

The man seen entering the woods also fits the description of the stranger who stopped in Newmarket shortly after the murder. At that time the suspect spent one night at a boarding house and, after he had left articles of women's lingerie were found in the room he had occupied.

The police have even a stronger clue to the man's identity than those supplied by Dover residents. These Dover residents were attracted by the suspicious actions of the man who entered the woods, particularly his furtive air and his apparent desire to avoid contact with anyone.

Shortly before he appeared in the outskirts of Dover he was seen for two days at Durham, a few miles distant, by the son of Dazeil Bodet, a farmer. Twice in the late afternoon the boy saw this man emerge from woodlands in Durham and climb over a fence into a pasture.

The man carried an old can. He appeared to be familiar with milking, for he would approach the cow and, using soothing terms, would proceed to milk the animal. Then, with his can, he would retire to a tree stump and proceed with his supper.

FURTIVE ACTIONS.

The Boudet boy remarked especially on the man's furtive manner. Before emerging from the edge of the woods into the open, the suspect would peer in all directions. Then he would step forth gingerly, gradually increasing his pace, until he was almost running when he reached the pasture fence.

Once in the pasture he would slow down until he had approached the cow. But during the milking operation, the Boudet boy said, the man was continually looking over his shoulder.

Police believe that the suspect has virtually lived on milk for the last several days. The Boudet boy said the strange tramp was very dirty. With the exception of the absence of his mustache and the fact he wore a hat, the excellent description given by the farmer boy fits that of the tramp barber the police are seeking.

The last young Boudet saw of the tramp he was headed in the direction of Dover, and the next trace police have of him was when he was seen by several persons on the outskirts of this town, and then was seen to enter the woods that now are surrounded.

M'MILLAN OFF TODAY FOR FAR NORTH

the Eskimos hundreds of years ago.

These ruins are found up and down the Labrador coast and, according to Eskimo legend, are the remains of houses built by a curious race which came to the shores in open boats without decks or sails hundreds of years ago. The remnants of the structures which still stand resemble the Norse ruins in Greenland.

"If we can get good evidence that they are the homes of Norsemen, then we have real grounds for believing America was discovered at least 350 years before Columbus came across," declared the Arctic adventurer.

MacMillan revealed that the three vessels in his little fleet are carrying Christmas presents for every child on the desolate Labrador coast.

TO CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS.

Candy, toys, dolls and the other appurtenances of Christmas in this country will replace the usual raw furnish as festive delights. The cargo of holiday presents will be distributed as the flotilla proceeds toward Kauk, where the first permanent scientific station in the far north is to be established. Kauk is to be the base of MacMillan's operations.

Another feature of the trip is to be a call at Hopedale, the Moravian Eskimo mission village of 300 souls established on the bleak peninsula 162 years ago. The explorer will present to the Rev. William Walter Perritt, head of the mission, $1,000 collected in voluntary contributions during his lecture tour last Winter. The Moravian mission is a part of the work of a denomination which has its head in this country at Bethlehem, Pa.

The village has never seen such a fund, Commander MacMillan said, explaining that $50 was sufficient to educate a child for an entire three year course there.

THREE IN FLEET.

One of the party is Abraham Bromfield, whose home is in Jack Lane's Bay, 150 miles south of Kauk, who is the party's official Eskimo interpreter. He returned with Macmillan to the United States and like it so much that he is planning a second trip.

The squadron consisting of sturdy little schooners Bowdoin and Radio and the 50-foot power boat Sesko, so-called from the Eskimo word meaning ice.

Stanley Field, head of the Field Museum and Frederick H. Rawson, Chicago banker, who is financing the expedition and whose son, Kenneth, is making his second trip with MacMillan, together with President Kenneth C. M. Sills of Bowdoin College and the explorer himself were to speak at brief exercises preceding the leave-taking today.

The boats will remain at Christmas Cove overnight, leaving there Sunday morning, the Radio and Sesko to go directly to Sydney, N. S., while the Bowdoin will call at Rockland to pick up Dr. Nell Fogg, MacMillan's nephew, who will accompany him to Sydney.

On Tuesday, July 5, all will set sail for Battle Harbor, Labrador, and continue northward to Kauk.

Mother and Son to Be Principals in Double Wedding

Worcester, June 25 (A.P.)—Mother and son will be principals in a double wedding July 2 when Mrs. Caro Adelaide Seymour will take her third husband, Edward E. Eldridge, and her son, William Seymour, will marry Miss Lillian Turnanqu.

The double ceremony will take place in the Dewey Street Baptist Church.

The couple will be married first with Mrs. Seymour and Mr. Eldridge as attendants, then as Mr. and Mrs. Seymour they plan to witness the marriage of the mother and Mr. Eldridge.

U. S. WARNS OF BRITAIN'S BIG NAVY DEMAND

tween this country and Great Britain.

It was apparent that Britain's tactics at Geneva, and particularly Bridgeman's characterization of America's demand for naval equality as "political hyplay," is not sitting well with Washington officialdom.

Neither, it was said, is this government prepared to listen to the British demand for reopening the Washington naval treaty concerning capital ships. Marked irritation was manifest over this reiterated British demand.

So far as this government is concerned, it was stated, the matter of capital ships was settled in 1921 at the Washington conference, and the settlement was embodied in the five-power treaty.

That treaty still has some years to run before revision.

In the light of Washington's briefing attitude today, and Britain's equally bristling attitude at Geneva, it is becoming apparent to observers here that the conference at Geneva is headed for the rocks unless concessions are forthcoming.

DISPUTE JAP PLAN.

Dispatches from Geneva indicate there is disagreement also over Japanese demands.

Experts who have studied the Japanese proposals announced today that if their program were carried out the actual strength of navies would be as follows: Submarines, Japan, 5.15; United States, 5; Great Britain, 2.83; cruisers and destroyers combined, Great Britain, 6.14; United States, 5; Japan, 3.24.

This means that the tonnage ratio for cruisers, destroyers and submarines combined would be: Great Britain, 5.77; United States, 5; Japan, 3.49.

Wives Unafraid as Byrd Fliers Await Hop-Off

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Correspondent.

Roosevelt Field, Mineola, N. Y., June 25.—"I'm used to my husband taking chances and I'm not at all apprehensive about this flight across the Atlantic."

This expression from Mrs. Bert Acosta, in an interview today, is typical of the calm attitude of the wives of members of the Byrd expedition who are impatiently waiting to take off for Paris in the giant three-motored monoplane, America.

Mrs. Acosta, a small, dark-eyed woman, the mother of two boys, Bert, Jr., four years old, and Allyn Lee, three years old, told International News Service that certainly did not regard the forthcoming flight to Paris as the most dangerous adventure her strapping, black-haired husband has participated in.

GIVES TO SEE HOP-OFF.

"Why, I think the work he has been doing all along, making test flights in new planes, is infinitely more dangerous," she said. "Everything is mapped out on a scientific basis for the Paris flight."

Mrs. Acosta and her sons are stopping at the Garden City Hotel, where they will receive the radio reports from the America after the hop-off.

Mrs. George O. Noville, the attractive, auburn-haired wife of Lieut. Noville, flight engineer of the America, is also staying at the same hotel.

Unlike Mrs. Acosta who has seen her husband take part in many flights and automobile speed races, she has not experienced the thrill of seeing her husband off on a dangerous mission, but she is fully as contained as Mrs. Acosta as the "zero hour" approaches.

"I won't faint," she said, smilingly, when she was reminded how Mrs. Charles Levine reacted when her husband took off for Europe.

Both Mrs. Acosta and Mrs. Noville expect to be present at the take-off, but they gave assurances that they would not be conspicuous.

Neither plans a trip to Europe if their husbands arrive abroad successfully.

BALCHEN IS UNMARRIED.

Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, wife of the commander of the expedition, is even more retiring. She has consistently declined to be interviewed or to comment in any way on the flight. She came to Garden City from Boston to be near her husband before he departs. The Byrds have three children.

The fourth member of the expedition, Lieut. Bernt Balchen, is unmarried. He has no wife or sweetheart to say goodbye to him, but he has a mother waiting for him in Oslo, Norway, when he gets to Europe.

Chamberlin and Levine Are Greeted in Pilsen

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 25 (A.P.).—After a day in the Czechoslovakia capital, Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, American transatlantic airmen, left early today for Pilsen, fifty miles southwest of Prague. They also will visit Marienbad, not far from Pilsen.

During their stay here they were received by the President of the Republic, Professor Masaryk and attended a series of functions, among them one at the City Hall and another at the American embassy. Wherever they appeared they were greeted enthusiastically.

After visiting Marienbad the airmen plan to go to Carlsbad, and then on Sunday, fly to Warsaw. Next day they intend to fly from Warsaw for Paris, with a possible brief stopover in Switzerland.

RIVAL FLIERS IN RACE TO FIRST SPAN PACIFIC

San Francisco June 25 (I.N.S.).—The race to span the Pacific by air is on.

In effect it is tri-cornered with Army, Navy and civilian flying contingents as the contestants.

With the last word in air navigation appliances combined in its instrument board, the Army entrant the giant tri-motored Fokker monoplane, prepared to take off from San Diego for Oakland, starting point, today.

In Honolulu a trim single-seated plane was being uncrated at Pearl Harbor Naval Base. It will seek the honors for the Navy, Richard Grace, its pilot, is a naval reservist.

And in a fenced-in machine shop here, final touches were being placed on the civilian-manned plane—the entry of Ernest Smith, air mail pilot. It is a huge single-motored plane that has been in the air mail service.

A take-off of one of the planes within 72 hours would not be surprising.

Rushed to completion by a huge force of men, the Oakland Municipal airport from which the army plane is officially scheduled to take off, was pronounced ready today.

A runway of sufficient length to enable heavily laden planes to take off has been constructed. Flood and searchlights are being installed. Arrival of the army plane from San Diego, piloted by Lieuts. Lester Maitland and Albert Hegenberger, is expected today or tomorrow. Official permission for their flight has been granted, and although the full moon period of July 14-15 had been set for their take-off, observers look for a much earlier start.

Accused Wife Charged With Starting Row Against Others

Middlesex Probate Court will be crowded next Tuesday morning with Everett folk anxious to catch a glimpse of George Carleton Murray, for whose love three women fought actual pitched battles in the streets of Everett. Murray is named as "the other man" in the divorce suit of William A. Scribner, Everett building contractor.

Mrs. Scribner, a slight, attractive woman, made no secret of her love for Murray, according to her husband's charges. Scribner testifying that she refused to give Murray up and left their home to go to him.

Mrs. Scribner denied that she had been instrumental in breaking up Murray's home, but the man's wife, called to the witness stand, said that they have been estranged for four years because of her husband's relations with Mrs. Scribner.

ADMITS BEATING HER

She told of seeing Mrs. Scribner waiting for Murray in Glendale square, how she had remonstrated with her, how Mrs. Scribner had refused to give up her friendship with Murray, and how finally the witness had punched the smaller woman several times.

There was another battle, though merely a verbal one, between Mrs. Scribner and Mrs. Hazel N. Powell of Fulton street, Medford.

There was still another woman who strove for a place in Murray's affections, according to the testimony of witnesses, but her place in the affections of Murray was won by Mrs. Scribner.

Miss Katherine Graves, president of Wellesley, '27, was unable to make the sailing, telegraphing at the last minute of the upset in her plans. She plans to sail on the Cunarder Samaria tomorrow, according to Miss Helen G. Jackson, chaperone of the party, meeting her classmates in London.

The group will tour the college towns and cities of England and the Continent with a big bathing carnival at Nice as one of their objectives. A visit to the battlefields of France is also in the itinerary.

Among the other passengers sailing were Mrs. Gertrude Winslow of No. 130 Clark street, [illegible]ton Centre, with her daughter, Leslie Winslow. It is said Mrs. Winslow, active worker in the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, is bound on a trip to Italy to explain the merits of the famous case to relatives and friends of Sacco. She boarded the vessel early and managed to elude reporters.

Among the Bostonians sailing were Captain Peter C. Borre, Hub attorney, with Mrs. Borre, leaving on an extended vacation tour; Rev. H. E. B. Speight, chaplain of Dartmouth College and former pastor of King's Chapel, with his son and daughter.

HARVARD 'RIOT' OFFICER NOW FIRE HERO

Patrolman James A. Prior, central figure in the police fracas with a group of Harvard students which resulted in the now famous "Battle of Harvard Square," today played a new role when he was the hero of a fire which threatened to destroy Lionel Hall, a dormitory in the college yard.

Noting smoke emerging from a room occupied by R. A. Pinkerton, a New York student at the college and son of the well-known detective, Patrolman Prior entered the building and warned the students, who fled to safety. Firemen subdued the flames before much damage was done.

It was Patrolman Prior who sent in the riot call which precipitated the terrific struggle between police and students in Harvard square several months ago. He was recently transferred to an outlying beat because, it is believed, of his part in the riot. He was substituting on his old beat when the fire broke out.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

A new system for providing COOL, WASHED AIR (without humidity) has just been installed in Filene's Basement

WE have purposely held off this announcement until the system, installed by us at a cost of a quarter of a million dollars, was actually working.

The hot days this week, when the thermometer hit 85 degrees on Wednesday, and 89 on Thursday, have given the system a most severe test. On these busy days the temperature in the basement was maintained from 10 to 14 degrees cooler all day long than the temperature on the street, and, still more important, excessive humidity and impurities were removed from this air.

Filene's basement is the first store in this section of the country to have this automatic ventilating system.

Stripped of technicalities, this system draws 4½ tons of fresh air per minute from above the roof, washes it in huge tanks by means of refrigerated water sprays, and then forces it through every corner of the basement, at the same time extracting all heated and used air.

Under this system the temperature of the basement could be almost any temperature we chose; 75 degrees was chosen as ideal after scientific experiments which showed it to be the right one — cool enough for comfort, not too cold to be a shock. The system is automatic. No matter how many people are in the store, or how high the temperature goes outside, the system automatically adjusts itself and keeps the temperature uniformly cool, the air uniformly fresh, and the humidity at the exact point for health and comfort!

Filene's Basement—where prices are reduced automatically, and the store kept cool automatically! SAVE MONEY IN COMFORT!

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Miss Ethel Cummings Becomes Mrs. John Malcolm Forbes Today at Noon Wedding in Trinity Church

TODAY WAS THE WEDDING DAY OF MISS ETHEL CUMMINGS AND JOHN MALCOLM FORBES. An alliance between two such importantly connected young people gives to a marriage celebration a place distinctly its own in the social chronicle. Before these two met at Trinity's altar at high noon a distinguished company rustled to places in allotted pews—a company of the town's fine old aristocracy, and predominantly of the Forbeses and the Paines and their wide and celebrated family lines.

NO MORE POPULAR A GIRL EVER WALKED up Trinity's hallowed aisle than this tall and slender daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Cummings (Lydia Paine), of Joy street. Her friends and admirers are legion—straight through debutante and college life she has been acclaimed a leader by her mates. A Summer on a ranch in the Northwest is the honeymoon program, before Mr. Forbes goes to his first parish. The bride has just been graduated from Radcliffe and the bridegroom from the Union Theological Seminary in New York.

A BAND OF NINE, EACH WEARING PINK frocks and wide rose-beige hats, preceded the bride, whose ivory satin gown was the last word in modish simplicity. Her veil was of tulle, caught by a single strand of orange blossoms, and there was fine old heirloom lace banding the veil. The attendants' gowns were simple summery chiffons and their arm bouquets all the blossoms of early Summer to be found in the old-fashioned gardens.

MISS EVELYN CUMMINGS WAS HONOR MAID, and a younger sister, Miss Margaret, was in the bevy. Two sisters-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Francis Cummings and Mrs. Charles Cummings, Jr., were in the pink-frocked company. Also Mrs. George Lyman Paine, who was Miss Ruth Forbes. Those included for "dear friendship" sake were Mrs. William E. Poole of Philadelphia, Miss Faith Ward of Milton, Miss Helen Chandler and Miss Frances Sturges. The reception, a comparatively small affair, was held at the Cummings home on the Hill, that fine mansion built by a Robert Treat Paine of Colonial days.

NOTHING IF NOT VERSATILE IN SPORTS IS young Mr. Forrester Clark. Not content with making a place on the Crimson crew that victoriously met Yale yesterday in the historic Thames River contest, he also represents his Alma Mater in polo. And today he made a quick jump from New London to Rye, N. Y., to meet Yale on the polo field in the four-sided intercollegiate meet. "Jimmy" Mandell is one of his polo mates, and the others are Joseph Cotton and Holden White, a doughty team to meet the Crimson's ancient enemy, the Blue.

AND NOW THE CRIMSON POLO PLAYERS having departed, new field to conquer, the Dedham Country and Polo Club field is deserted. The veterans who play for the love of the sport are transferring themselves to the William Cameron Forbes farm at Ellis. They meet late on Monday afternoon, these friendly contenders—and they include Hallam Movius, the "Governor" himself, Philip Saltonstall, B. Nason Hamlin, Morley Wetmore, Samuel Hopkins, John Hopewell, Shaw Sprague, George Richmond Fearing, 3d, and Edward Monroe. It's probably a last afternoon, before a general scattering for the Summer.

OUT IN THE PRETTY LITTLE STONE CHURCH on the Phillips Andover Academy green Miss Frances Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Thompson of Andover, today became the bride of Allan Vanderhoef Heely of Plainfield. The hour of the ceremonial is four in the afternoon, and Miss Emily Thompson is the maid of honor for her sister. The bridegroom's chief attendant is his brother, and the ushers are Edward Bourne, Vale Warren, John P. Stevens, Jr., Edward N. Case, Charles Gurney and Augustus Thompson, 3d.

MISS EMILY THOMPSON AS THE HONOR maid has a gown for the occasion of gossamer golden yellow. The four other attendants wear green as their contribution to a bridal picture essentially June-like. Miss Louise Thayer is a bridesmaid, and so is Miss Eleanor Sutton. Mrs. Richard D. Heely is in attendance; and also Miss Hildegarde Kimhardt (who on Monday becomes Mrs. Parker Hamilton in St. Paul's Church in North Andover) The bride's exquisite type is radiantly set off with ivory white satin and rare old rose point lace veil

THE SAMARIA TAKES OUT AN ENORMOUS company of prominent Bostonians when she steams away from the Cunard docks tomorrow. It is a list distinctly Social Registerish and includes ever so many Bostonians who make the transatlantic crossing regularly each Summer. Dr. and Mrs. Elisha Flagg are sailing. The "Tim" Adamowskis are Samaria passengers. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gray and their two daughters, Miss Marie Louise Gray and Miss Edith Gray, embark.

MR. AND MRS. EARLE E. CONWAY ARE sailing with their daughters, Miss Virginia Conway and Miss Janet Conway. As they have done for the past several Summers, the Conways will do a motor tour of the Continent. The Adamowskis go over to renew home ties and to make a round of the Continental capitals and spas. The Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill and Mrs. Sherrill sail on the Samaria. Also the Hugh D. Scotts of Wellesley, Mr. and Mrs. Scott and Miss Helen Scott and Robert and Richard Scott. The list also has down the Henry Lyman family, including Miss Cora and two sons, Charles and Henry, Jr. Altogether it is as representative a Boston crowd as has sailed from here in a long time.

of reasonable length—never mind if it gets wet.

Clothes, as Carlyle shows in "Sartor Resartus," make all the difference between a king in his grandeur and a "featherless biped."

COMMANDER BYRD, in his flight, will make an important experiment, different from Lindbergh's dashing adventure. In a big Fokker plane, with three engines, Commander Byrd will take three other men, a radio which will send news as the journey progresses. That flight is the beginning of serious transatlantic passenger carrying on a sound basis.

IT SHOULD be remembered that Rodman Wanamaker, who planned a transatlantic flight in 1914, and has spent $500,000 carrying out his idea, has made the Byrd flight possible. He deserves the nation's thanks, not merely for spending his money but for sticking to his plan to promote American flying.

FILM COMPANIES will cut all salaries, above $50 a week, from 10 to 25 per cent. The saving will be $200,000 a week, about $10,000,000 a year.

This will not hurt pictures. Sensible economy never hurt anything. And it won't keep the right man or woman from getting twice as much as any movie actor ever got, if he or she can earn it.

AT THIS moment of flying enthusiasm, one word of caution is necessary, and expert fliers remind you of it.

Don't go up "just to know how it feels" unless you know the pilot and the machine.

There are unsafe machines, plenty of them, including many bought second-hand from the United States government. There are unskillful pilots, and others skillful, but reckless.

Barring dangerously bad weather, bad pilots and unsafe machines, flying is now safe. But BE CAREFUL.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S pet raccoon ran away and now is in some tree. Where Nature intended her to live, that raccoon lady is as happy as President Coolidge would be if he were out of office, out of politics, living quietly in his native State.

Because she lived with President Coolidge, Rebecca is discussed all over the United States. Thousands of theatrical ladies will envy the little raccoon's publicity. She is like the rooster in the fable that scratched up a large diamond and would rather have had a grain of corn.

A WOMAN holds and refuses to release another woman's three-year-old son until a certain debt be paid. This now seems monstrous, but once it would have seemed reasonable. Dickens fought and broke down a law that put any debtor in prison, to stay there until his debt was paid.

All agreed that respect for property demanded debt imprisonment. "How are you going to collect money if you can't put the man in jail?" was asked. Before the French Revolution, when courts authorized torture of the accused, and even torture of innocent witnesses, the question was asked: "How can you have any justice if you don't permit torturing witnesses and the accused?"

'OTHER MAN' IN SCRIBNER SUIT IS CALLED

Mrs. Powell, who is the mother of four children, frankly admitted on the stand, that she had sought Murray's company and that she, on one occasion, waited for hours outside Murray's home until Mrs. Scribner left. Murray's apartment, that she might go in. Mrs. Powell and her husband are estranged.

She told how, after she had been in Murray's company on several occasions, Mrs. Scribner came to her home on a Sunday afternoon and "bawled her out," claiming that Murray was "her land and her exclusive property."

QUOTED AS "MY MAN."

"I am Mrs. Scribner," she said the builder's wife saluted her. 'Do you know Carl Murray?' When I replied I did, she said, 'I want you to keep away from him.' I said, 'What difference is that to you. You are married.' She said, 'I don't care. He's my man. You keep away from him. I'll get you another man, but he's my man.'

"I said to her, 'You have a husband. How about letting me have Mr. Murray?' She then told me she didn't love her husband any more and told me again to keep away from Murray. She said she had lost all respect of her family and friends because of her love for Murray, but that she wasn't going to give him up unless she had to."

Less than a week after, Mrs. Powell said, she was summoned into Murray's home by the latter, and when she went into the living room she found Mrs. Scribner there, and Murray said to her (the witness):

"Were you ever in my house with me alone, Mrs. Powell?" "I replied, 'Yes.'

"He then said, 'Were you ever in my house to spend the evening with me or anything further?' 'Of course I was,' I replied.

"THROWN OUT OF DOOR."

"Mrs. Scribner broke in then and said, 'Carl, I didn't know that about you,' and he picked me up and threw me out of the door."

Attorney Morris T. Silverstein proceeded to question the witness concerning her "watch" of Mrs. Scribner, and she replied that she had seen Mrs. Scribner going in and out of Murray's apartments a number of times during the day and night. On one occasion, she said, it was 4 o'clock at night when she came out.

"Did Mrs. Scribner tell you she gave Murray money every week?"

"Yes, she did. She said she gave him money at the time. That he owed her a pile."

"She went in there one night at 7 o'clock?" volunteered the witness, "and didn't come out until 10 o'clock." Hesitating a moment, she added, "I know because I was waiting to go in there."

Taken under cross-examination by Attorney Wilfred J. Paquet, counsel for Mrs. Scribner, the witness was asked:

"That was quite a talk you had with Mrs. Scribner, wasn't it?" "You bet," she replied.

HAS FOUR CHILDREN.

"Have you any children?" "I certainly have. Four."

"Do you live with your husband?" "No, sir."

"You sometimes go under the name of Hazel T. Brooks, don't you?" "Sometimes, yes, that is my maiden name."

"You have been over to Murray's house?" "Yes, sir," she replied, without hesitating.

"And written him letters?" "Yes, sir."

"And notes?" "Yes, sir."

"Did you and Mr. Murray have a quarrel over anything?" "Yes, sir."

"Over what?" "Over Mrs. Scribner."

Mrs. Gertrude Murray, the estranged wife of the Everett man of many loves, took the stand and told how she left him four years ago because of his friendship for Mrs. Scribner.

She told of seeing Mrs. Scribner waiting in the street when on one occasion, she testified, she went up to Mrs. Scribner and told her she knew why she was standing around.

She said she accused Mrs. Scribner of calling up her husband at his place of employment and Mrs. Scribner denied it. Her husband was present at this moment, however, and she said she asked him if this was not so, and he replied, "Yes, she did, and I don't want her to call me again."

"With that," said Mrs Murray, "I hit her, and hit her again."

"Did you ask your husband to give up Mrs. Scribner?" "Yes, sir."

"And did he refuse to do so?" "Yes, he did."

ASK FOR PUBLIC SACCO PROBE

The Swedish Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee, in a lengthy cablegram to Governor Fuller today, called upon the Governor to open the doors of his office to the public while he is conducting his investigation of the case of the two men who are now awaiting death in the electric chair.

The Swedish committee regards with hope the appointment of an advisory commission," the cablegram stated. "However, with only 14 days left before Sacco and Vanzetti, under orders of Judge Thayer, are put to death in the electric chair, we are filled with extreme anxiety.

"Filled all the emphasis at our command we claim that this investigation is to be open to the public. Governor Fuller allow counsel for the two defendants to be present when anything is said against them. Let the two men be found guilty in a trial which has been horribly unfair."

POLICE CLERK AIDS IN CASHING BAD CHECK

The story of how the clerk of a police station innocently assisted a former policeman in cashing a worthless check, came out in Central Court today when Merle Robards of Revere, the former patrolman, was given a one-month suspended sentence from jail for passing a $50 check in the Washington Shirt Shop, Washington street.

Merle went into the store, he admits, bought a $20 suit, and received change of $30. The clerk in the place at first declined to honor the check, but, when Robards claimed to have been a policeman once, which fact the clerk verified by calling Clerk Harold Walkins at the Milk street station, the check was accepted. Robards pleaded guilty and agrees to make restitution.

BODY OF CHILD FOUND IN BUNDLE AT REVERE

Revere police today went to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Mollica, Breeden's Lane, North Revere, and dug up what they had been told to believe was the body of an infant that had been murdered.

Mrs. Mollica reported to the police that a bundle was thrown into her front yard from an automobile last night by a man and in which a man and a woman were riding. In fright the woman buried the bundle and later notified the police.

The bundle was found to contain the body of a stillborn child. It was taken to the Northern mortuary.

ROAD STANDS MUST GUARD AGAINST FIRE

Roadside barbecue stands, catering to autoists with a line of roast beef sandwiches, "dogs" and fried chicken must secure permits from district forest wardens or go out of business, an edict from Commissioner of Conservation William A. L. Bazeley today decreed.

Each stand must hereafter have two fire extinguishers or fire pumps on hand and keep the vicinity free from cushion and other inflammable materials, the order provides.

BOY LOSES EYE, 2 OTHERS HURT, IN AUTO CRASH

One boy lost his left eye and two others were seriously injured when an auto in which they were riding to work skidded after a tire blew out and crashed into a telegraph pole, stripping it off at Walpole street and Davis avenue, Norwood, today.

The injured are Edward K. Keller, 18; his brother Arthur, 14, and Emil Lenin. All were rushed to the Norwood Hospital. The latter lost his left eye. When the auto struck the pole the three occupants were thrown 20 feet.

WHITE CITY, CHICAGO, WIPED OUT BY FIRE

Chicago, June 25 (I.N.S.)—White City, Chicago's historic South Side amusement park, was practically wiped out by fire early today. Herbert Byfield, president of the amusement company, estimated the loss at $250,000.

The blaze started near the illuminated central tower, and before the first fire apparatus had arrived the structure was a blazing torch. It created a stirring scene as it crashed to the ground. The tower was the principal loss.

SOUTH DAKOTA SOLONS VISIT COOLIDGE

Rapid City, S. D., June 25 (A.P.)—President and Mrs. Coolidge faced today an experience shared by few, if any, White House occupants—an official welcome from an entire State Legislature.

Scheduled to arrive shortly before noon in a special train, the legislators, many with their families, planned to motor directly to Camp Galena, one mile from the Summer White House, and, after an outdoor luncheon they were to be received by the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

The party was headed by Lieut.-Gov. S. E. Covey as president of the Senate and Ray Williamson, Speaker of the House. The Legislature had recessed a special session for the occasion.

There was a note of regret that Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood of the Philippines was absent. Had he been here, the situation would have brought pleasant reminders, no doubt, since many of the legislators voted in the South Dakota primary of 1924 for General Wood for President and Mr. Coolidge for Vice-President.

The General, however, was on his way East after giving President Coolidge a personal report on his administration in the Philippines. He assured Mr. Coolidge he was eager to continue at his post in Manila and received an assurance from him that there was no thought but to have him remain there indefinitely.

SLEEPING SICKNESS IS KILLING DR. G. P. BENTON

Minneapolis, Minn., June 25 (I.N.S.) —Dr. Guy Potter Benton, 62, one of the most widely known educators and university presidents in the country, is near death at the home of his sister here today from sleeping sickness.

Dr. Benton was stricken with the disease in March 1924, while president of the University of the Philippines.

Dr. Benton was formerly president of the University of Vermont at Burlington.

THERMOMETER CLIMBS; PREDICT 80 TOMORROW

The chilly restraining check on the mercury, which kept temperature below 60 here yesterday, released its hold on New England weather today to allow the silvery column to hit the officially predicted mark of 80 above, or over, tomorrow. There is a remote possibility of rain, as indicated by showers eastward from the Dakotas to the Lakes Region.

Forecaster Jardine said specifically: Partly cloudy today and Sunday; slightly warmer tonight; fresh south and southwest winds.

"RUBBER RED" PAYS VISIT TO HUB PORT

A strange bird today was brought into the Fish Pier on the mackerel seiner Alden. The visitor flew aboard the boat about 20 miles southeast of Block Island, last Thursday night.

It is the size of a duck. The body is red and seems to color the silvery bill and has long yellow legs and claws. A fisherman expressed the opinion that the bird was known as a "rubber red," for its ability to bend its long legs in any direction.

SALEM WOMAN IS ROBBED OF $170 NI OWN HOME

Salem, June 25 (A.P.)—Mrs. Angelina Fiorini reported to police today that she had been robbed of $170 while her two men who entered the room of her home were making the bed and demanded to know "where the money is." When she refused to tell them, one tore her dress and took the money which she had secreted in her clothing. Then he fled through a window and disappeared.

Pons Comet Comes Nearest to Earth Tomorrow Night

Washington, June 25 (A.P.).—Paying its third visit in little more than a century, the Pons-Winnecke comet tomorrow night, by coming within 3,500,000 miles, will make its closest contact with the earth.

The Naval Observatory here is planning its study through a 23-inch telescope.

The comet first came into view Monday night. After tomorrow night it can be seen for several days until about July 1 when it will disappear over the southern horizon.

The comet was first discovered by Jean Louis Pons, the French astronomer, at Marseilles, on June 12, 1819, and its second and last visit to the earth was on March 8, 1858.

Nise Kitty, Laughs at Death!

"The Cat and the Canary" at the Park seems to be possessed of the proverbial nine lives. Six of those lives, in terms of seasons, have been used up to date. According to this estimate and all other auguries, "The Cat" has three more to go.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Wanted — Ten Phylacteries.

The property department at the De Mille studios was required to provide the 5,000 players in "The King of Kings" with everything from shawls to phylacteries. This last item, in case you're curious, is parchment with Scriptural inscription.

SUMMERTIME DRAMA TAKES HEART AS NEW ATTRACTIONS LOOM IN THE OFFING

THE CORN BELT CUT-UPS are Joe E. Brown and Flo Lewis, principal illuminators of "Twinkle Twinkle," the show at the Colonial that tells about the movies, Pullman cars, sleuthing and much other information.

THE CLEANSED MAGDALENE stands freed from the Seven Deadly Sins as the brooding Judas wonderingly surveys the change that the Lord hath wrought. Joseph Schildkraut and Jacqueline Logan are these vivid Biblical characters in "The King of Kings" (Tremont).

WITH A HALF NELSON and several arm-locks Douglas Gilmore wins a marriage license with Joan Crawford in "The Taxi Dancer," film of the dancing academy story which recently ran serially in the Boston Evening American.

ONE TOO MANY. In "Rolled Stockings" at the Metropolitan, Nancy Phillips finds James Hall in the inevitable result of too many trips to the punch bowl. The ginned up hero seems due for a severe lecture on the wages of sin.

TO PRESERVE NEGATIVE OF BIBLE FILM

Future generations will see Cecil B. De Mille's New Testament story, "The King of Kings," just as it appears on the screen at the Tremont, according to word from the De Mille studios, for an extra negative has been sealed and placed in a bank vault for later years.

Convinced that this Biblical production possessed elements of permanent worth, William Eistren, general manager of the De Mille studios, arranged for the filming of a third negative in addition to the two usually shot on the larger productions. This will do away with the danger of destroying the pictorial quality of the picture through damage which cannot be avoided in making hundreds of prints from the master negative.

It is said that the master negative of "The Birth of a Nation" made twelve and a half years ago, is in a brittle condition, and near the end of its usefulness. While modern methods have prolonged the life of screen masterpieces, nevertheless, the constant use breaks down the best oiled negative in the course of a comparatively few years, and it is highly essential that any picture of historical character should preserve an extra negative for posterity. The revival of old productions, so much in vogue these days, usually has been accompanied by the necessary elimination of whole sequences, due to the fact that parts of the negative are so frayed and warped that good prints cannot be made from them and the third negative of "The King of Kings" will guard against this.

Imposing Nuptial Scene in New Boston Film

A marriage ceremony with all the pomp and splendor of Rome, is one of the features of Jetta Goudal's new star picture, "Fighting Love," directed by Nils Olaf Chrisander, which comes to the New Boston tomorrow. The ceremony takes place in a medieval chapel, especially designed from copies of sketches by Michelangelo. The set, one of the most beautiful ever made at the DeMille Studio, took more than a month to make because hundreds of ecclesiastical figures had to be carved on its walls and columns.

Jetta Goudal, the star, is supported by Victor Varconi, Henry B. Walthall and Loui Natheaux.

BLANCHE BURNETTE thrives on the tropical warmth of "Kongo," the African thriller now current at the Gayety.

LONG KNOWS HIS INJUNS

An interesting personality with "The Cat and the Canary" at the Park is Charles J. Long, who plays the guard from the maniac asylum, and contributes much to the performance this company is giving. Mr. Long is one-eighth Shawnee Indian, in the direct line of descent from the famous Tecumseh, chief of that tribe. His early life was spent on the reservation near Amarillo, Tex.—where all the Indian lore, tricks of the trail, shooting with bow and arrow and the general life of the Indian boy was his. He later found employment on the King ranch, reputedly the largest ranch in Texas, on the "J-M" ranch and on others, as cowboy, fence rider, and "broncho-buster."

Discovers New Game With Soup; Silence Observed

Don Trent, appearing in "Kongo" at the Gayety, has discovered a new game which he believes will rival in interest the crossword puzzle. He ordered a plate of alphabet soup at the Lambs' Club a few weeks ago and when the waiter placed the dish before him, began studying the contents with more than passing interest.

"What's the big idea?" asked Chester De Vonde, who was his guest, "aren't you going to eat your soup?"

"I am," said Trent, as he looked even more deeply at the conglomerate mass of letters comprising what is known as alphabet soup, "but what I am trying to find out is how many times I can form the word "Kongo" with the letters in my plate."

Trent says anyone who wants to play the game can do so with his compliments as he does not intend to

MOVIE SCENE COMPLETE WASHOUT

Shampooing a street with soap is enough of a novelty to draw a crowd of tourists, even in Hollywood. In its initial stages it looked like the last word in out-door cleanliness. Men stepped out into the middle of the roadway with pails and mops and proceeded to asymetrically apply liquid soap. After they had spread it smoothly from curb to curb they attached a fire hose to a nearby hydrant and proceeded to rinse it.

Louise Brooks

In a few minutes, a snappy roadster dashed around the grade at the corner of Marathon and Oxford streets and skidded in a graceful curve with the feminine occupant screaming and throwing her arms about the male driver. The latter seemed to enjoy it.

James Hall was the driver. His companion was Louise Brooks. Hanging perilously on the front bumper was a cameraman, and standing in the crowd on the curb was Richard Rosson the director. The scene is one of the exciting incidents in Paramount's "youth picture" "Rolled Stockings," which starts today at the Metropolitan.

Later in the day, men with mops and hose began washing the soap away in a sea of suds, and the visiting housewives marveled at the efficiency of the Los Angeles street cleaning department.

"Natural Drama" Found in Jungle Film Thriller

"Natural drama" is introduced at the Fenway, where "Chang," the Siamese jungle picture produced by Ernest B. Schoedsack and Merian C. Cooper is now being shown.

The chief fear of these men is that many will look upon their production as a travel picture. They insist that it is straight drama, with suspense, comedy, continuity and tempo. It has a story, too.

"Natural drama," Mr. Cooper explains, "is drama produced with natural actors in their own environment, living the story of their lives and their struggle for existence.

"This new jungle picture is the story of a people surrounded by an abundance of food. There is so much food that a superabundance of creatures live on it and on each other. There is the constant menace that this teeming vegetable and animal life will overwhelm the humans struggling against it. On this we built our story."

Sights of London in New Orpheum Photoplay

The "Tub Thumpers" of the Marble Arch, a group of curbstone orators who advance heated solutions of all types of problems in their appeals to their sidewalk audiences, well-known sights of London, are shown in an interesting sequence in Fox film's "One Increasing Purpose," which comes to the Orpheum Monday.

There is little known as to the origin of these orators or way they confine their activities to the Marble Arch; however, they have held forth there as long as anyone can remember and so have become a London institution.

Edmund Lowe plays the leading role in this production under the direction of Harry Beaumont. All of the exteriors were made on the actual scenes of the story in and around London.

Claims Old Bill Is Purely an Imaginary Figure

"Old Bill" was the drawing of a frame of mind, not an actual person, according to Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, author of "The Better 'Ole," in which Syd Chaplin is being seen at the Modern and Beacon Theatres.

"Old Bill" was an imaginary type," said Captain Bairnsfather, "but he got so well known that I found the soldiers trying to look like him. Eventually he became so real to people that I even received acrimonious letters from a woman who said she was Old Bill's wife, and seemed to think that I was making money out of her husband and that she ought to get some of it."

The Old Bill sketches became so popular that Captain Bairnsfather was officially detailed, in succession, to the French lines, the Italian lines and the American lines, to make his sketches of the comic side of soldier life.

NO MORE SHE'LL ROAM

STAGE AND SCREEN

What to Do With Our Cops.

Of the eight original, and once famous, Keystone Kops, six were drafted for service for "The Better 'Ole," in which Syd Chaplin is starring at the Modern and Beacon. In his early screen days Syd worked with these men on the lot.

CHOICE DUETS, SOLEMN AND SUNNY, FRESH FROM THE LAND OF LIGHT AND SHADE

SOBERLY REFLECTIVE. Edmund Lowe and Lila Lee are heavy weighted with the burden of sorrow in "One Increasing Purpose" at the Orpheum. The new film has much to do with the trials of the war and the worse tribulations of an apparently happy home.

THE BOGEY MAN IS COMING, but there is no cause to be alarmed, children, for the great big hero man is giving the frightened lady his personal attention. Natalie Kingston and Milton Sills in "Framed" (Olympia).

ANOTHER HERO is Victor Varconi who seems to find a great deal to protect Jetta Goudal from in "Fighting Love," the film of Italian gaiety and African hardship, starting tomorrow at the Keith-Albee Boston.

ENJOY LIFE BY DANCING SAYS JOAN

If you don't enjoy dancing, you don't enjoy life to its utmost.

This is the contention of Joan Crawford, star of "The Taxi Dancer" at Loew's State, who was a Broadway dance celebrity before attaining a like position as a picture actress.

One can't talk to Joan for five minutes without realizing that she is a girl who is getting the utmost out of every experience, whose radiant personality carries her through every difficulty to a point a little bit higher than she occupied before.

Joan says that dancing taught her to project this personality, to live in a veritable whirl of life and rhythm, and by sheer force to conquer her misfortunes rather than let them conquer her.

"Dancing is far more than a physical exercise," says Miss Crawford. "It is something that takes hold of one's spirits as well, and pitches them to a higher key. I would advise every young person, and especially every girl, to study dancing, even if she knows that she will never put it to any so-called 'practical' use."

Douglas Fairbanks Starts Shooting "The Gaucho"

Douglas Fairbanks has officially begun production on his new picture, "The Gaucho." The only thing novel about the start was the fact that the star did not appear in the opening scene; also the first scene was taken first, meaning that Doug began at the beginning.

MY FEATURED PERFORMANCE

By JOE E. BROWN
Star of "Twinkle Twinkle" at the Colonial.

Joe E. Brown

Old Ma Nature can share with me credit for any success that may be mine, past, present or future. She certainly said a mouthful to me. My mouth actually serves me as an audience barometer. If I find the going difficult at the outset of any performance I wait for a chance to open wide, and if they fail to respond then I know it's going to be a cold, cruel evening.

One thing is most interesting to me is the reaction of the various audiences to the same jokes. For instance, an audience in the evening, made up of a great many men, will laugh louder but not as long as an afternoon gathering composed of women. The latter seem to take longer to "get" a joke and then when they do they'll chuckle over it until the next one. When a man has laughed, however, he is through.

People will always enjoy slapstick comedy. You know yourself that if a cart should be dumped in the street the natural reaction of the onlookers is laughter. Seeing another person in hot water is always cause for mirth. The days of slinging custard pies will never really pass, although it may come in other forms.

People enjoy seeing others in physical discomfort. A man who falls, as soon as he gets to his feet, or who is hit over the head, every time he turns around, can provoke laughter in any audience any time, anywhere and at any price.

New Ford Car Is Mystery; Small Merchants Doomed?

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Now you see it, now you don't—the new Ford car.

One day the newspapers print a detailed description of the much discussed new product. The next day hey announce a denial that any product such as described actually exists. This is followed by a charge that "experimental advertisements in regard to the new Ford car" have been stolen.

B. C. Forbes

Thus the mystery keeps mystifying the public every day—and particularly Wall Street where coming developments in the motor world are awaited with intense interest, not to say anxiety, for Wall Street reasons that if the new Ford vehicle proves "a knock-out," the shares of some of the manufacturers of low-priced cars would suffer. So far, such shares have not suffered.

ARE HOUSE-TO-HOUSE salesmen making serious inroads upon the business of independent small merchants?

The recent column on the troubles encountered by small merchants has brought from one reader a comprehensive analysis, from which these sentences are taken:

"What you recently wrote prompts the suggestion that a great change in the National merchandising operations is surely and slowly undermining the business of the small merchants, and that within the next few years a large percentage of those now engaged in business are going to be forced out for the simple reason that they can no longer compete with the mail-order houses, the great manufacturing concerns—thousands of them—who are now selling direct to consumers, and the vast department stores and specialty stores which are constantly enlarging their operations and are, particularly, driving with irresistible force their market prices and delivery service into every home.

"The house-to-house specialty salesman has assumed tremendous proportions. Take one item—the sale of silk hosiery. There is one concern that has a highly organized force of over 5,000 salesmen, who cover every town and hamlet in the United States. They sell in half dozen of dozen lots. Even if the sales would average but $10 per day per man this would mean $50,000 a day.

"The horrible part about it is that nothing can be done to save the little fellow, for the great economic law of big volume——service—great assortment of goods — the latest styles and lower prices—is on its way."

Isn't it the truth?

IS THERE something about oil that tends to produce scandals? Ever since the early days of the industry in Pennsylvania there have been periodical unsavory revelations. Of late years the courts have been kept unusually busy attempting to punish alleged wrong-doers.

And now the world is treated to the spectacle of two highly responsible citizens of the United States keeping themselves in hiding abroad rather than return to face investigation and the evidence of an episode.

The steel industry hasn't experienced such scandals. Nor have the manufacturing of the cotton industry the shoe industry, etc.

Is it too much to expect that the public utilities will be by the authorities will discourage fresh oil scandals in future?

ADVERTISING has become one of America's most important industries. Also, fittingly, one of the most enterprising.

Advertising giants are holding the twenty-third annual convention of the International Advertising Association at Denver next week. E. D. Gibbs, general director of the National Cash Register Company, who is general chairman of the program committee and an ex-president of the association, has lined up an important program.

The convention should get off to a good start: It opens with an informational meeting on Sunday afternoon. The list of speakers reads like a page from "Who's Who"—Governor Binkley, mayors, business magnates and, to wind up the convention, Senator Lenroot.

Surely it says something for the interest advertising men have in their profession that so many of them are ready to journey to Colorado at this season.

RADIO DIALOG

By WILLIAM ROARK

RADIO listeners have long revered iron cast announcers singers, orchestras, players and operators. Everyone in radio, except one, has been applauded and smiled at. Yet the one man who is most important is usually forgotten.

The people who do the hardest work in radio are the salesmen and dealers and retailers. Without them to sell us radios where would we get our concerts? How long concert stations operate if there were no radios sold to listeners? Without radio stores the radio stars would soon go plumbing.

Yet the dealers and retailers do not get their pictures in the papers. No one writes poems about them. They receive no bouquets, and the only mail they get are urgent requests for the love of Pete this is the tenth time will you PLEASE remit or we will get the sheriff after you, your truly.

They were there for business. Soon the floorwalker corralled all the two hundred salesmen, retailers, dealers and two waiters who got in by mistake, thinking it was a Salvation Army donation.

Here bright, inspirational talks told the retailers how to sell $500 radio sets to customers who still owed last month's butcher bill. We looked over these sets and the cheaper ones and decided that if radio was as good as that we would rob the baby's bank. Before we got through we did sign something which entitles us to a radio when we finish paying for it.

Plans were made for the summer months. Dealers, it appears are as fully embarrassed by a rush of customers in the month of December There are so many customers, the dealers can hardly do their own work, let alone wait on customers.

So they want people to buy in the Summer when the store is nice and cool.

"The boss is usually on his vacation and you can talk to the clerks as long as you want to. In the winter, they are in such a hurry they sell the sets across the door. Many a customer does not even know what he has bought until he gets it home.

One man paid cash and then discovered that his records wouldn't fit. Another bought an eight tube Chinese model lacquered piano when he went into a store for a fresh battery.

So buy in the Summer and Fall, say the retailers, you can talk all day to us and find out what you are buying.

• • •

Another reason we discovered. All the sets that will be sold next winter are being made now. So there is nothing to wait for, as the next changes will come next summer.

• • •

After making the dealers listen to the radio concert and dance produced there was a lot of static at our table because some people did not know how to swallow soup.

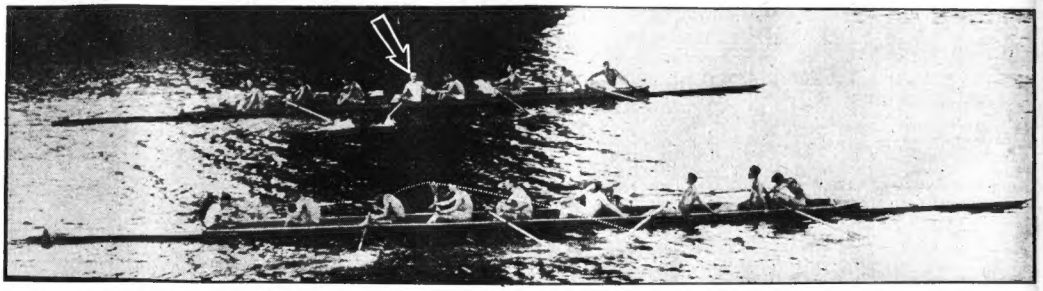
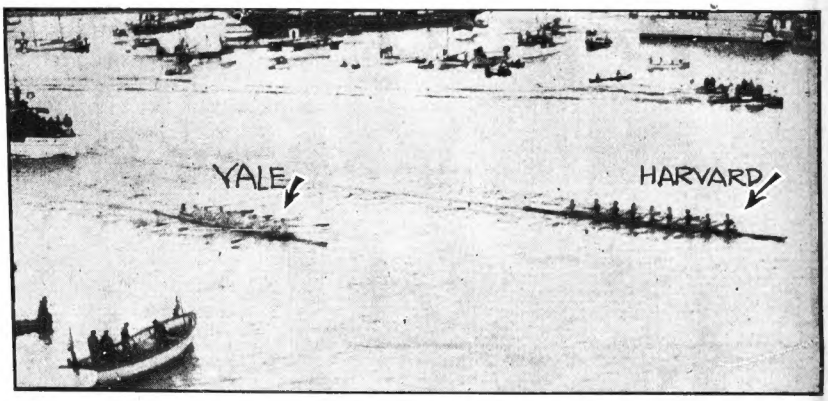
WHAT'S UNDER THAT TAN? That is the question concerning Jack Dempsey, ex-champion, which is puzzling the entire sports world. Is he still fit, or is he burned out? In this picture he certainly looks fit.



AFTER SIX LEAN YEARS COMES THE LUCKY SEVENTH. Coached by Ed Brown, captained by Geoffrey Platt, and stroked magnificently by Jack Watts, the captain-elect, Harvard's crew swept to a well-earned victory over Ed Leader's Yale eight, for the first time since a Haines-coached Crimson crew won from a collapsed Eli shell in 1920. The two eights are seen exhausted, after yesterday's race at New London. Arrow points to Captain Platt in Harvard boat. (I.N.R. photo.)

A NEW ASTEROID. Miss Ariel Vilas, aged 12, of Hot Springs, who reached the semi-finals of the Arkansas women's tourney and had second low with a card of 89. (I.N.R. photo.)



BY THE SLIM LENGTH of an eight-oared shell, Harvard rows to a victory over Yale in a race during which she was never behind. This I. N. R. photo shows the sensational finish at New London.

MAID OF THE SEA. Miss Myrtle Clark, who piloted her craft into second place in the race for express runabouts during the Dorchester Bay Speed Boat Regatta.

BREAKING THE TAPE. I.N.R. photo showing clos e finish of the 100-yard dash of the N. E. A. A. U. field meet for girls held at Franklin Park. Miss Ma rion Troop of the B. S. A. was first, Helga Jacobson, second, and Gertrude Doyle of the Malden A. C. thi rd.

FROM DIP TO DIPLOMA. The Zitenfield twins, who are swimming down the Hudson from Albany to New York, took time off to receive their diplomas from Public School No. 9. (I.N.R. photo.)

MISS AS GOOD AS HER SMILE. Little Betty Nuthall, Miss Barelegs, is sweet sixteen only, but she can play some tennis. She has beaten Molla Mallory at Wimbledon and looks like a real threat for Helen Wills. (I.N.R. photo.)

A NEW FEATHER in the cap of the Boston Swimming Association, which has turned out many fine girl athletes. This is Miss Julia "Sis" Roundhebler, the walking champion.

SENATORS AND SOX AT FENS

Fenway Park, June 25.—The Washington Senators and the Red Sox met in the second game of the series here today.

A large Saturday crowd was present to see the Senators, with Tris Speaker in their lineup, against Bill Carrigan's red hosed players.

The Senators have been going along smoothly since their crippled name back to work, and they promise to furnish as much competition as any other club for the Hurlers shenanigans, who pick terribly on the weaker clubs.

Walter Johnson, with the coming of Summer, and complete recovery from his injured leg, is doing his regular stunt once more, and that makes the club dangerous. Walter according to the boys from Washington, is just as good as ever, and able to work as often as most of the younger heavers. He will probably perform at the Fenway this afternoon.

Peter Stewart to Lead Yale Crew

New London, Ct., June 25.—Yale created a new precedent when, following yesterday's race, the varsity elected Coxswain Peter Stewart captain of next year's Yale eight.

Stewart's home is in New Orleans. His name is of the class of 1928.

Five of the men who rowed in the varsity against Harvard will be available another year. The men lost by graduation are E. F. Hobbs, D. Warren and E. R. Wardwell.

Dempsey Starts Training Monday

Saratoga Lake, N. Y., June 25 (I.N.S.)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, will begin work at his training camp here on Monday in preparation for his 15 round battle with Jack Sharkey in New York on July 21. For the first time in his career he will begin training early in July and will also work out on the road.

Dempsey was 32 years old yesterday and a birthday party was given in his honor here by his old friend Tom Luther. The birthday cake was a foot high.

TWIM SWIMMERS RESUME LONG-DISTANCE TEST

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 25 (I.N.S.)—Bernice and Florence Twimfeld, the swimming twins who are attempting to set a new record for the Albany-New York marathon on the Hudson River, will leave here at noon today on the next lap of their trip. They hope to reach Beacon, a distance of 12 miles, today.

The girls interrupted their swim near this city yesterday and proceeded to New York by train to be present at their graduation exercises from public school. The twins are 13 years old.

and when Barrett tried for second after the catch was doubled up. With to Farrell. NO RUNS.

NINTH INNING.

Braves—Butler tossed out Gautreau. Gibson batted for Goldsmith. Gibson fanned. R. Smith batted for J. Smith. Barrett tossed out R. play.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN WHEN JACKS MEET?

Jack Dempsey, former champion, tries to come back against Boston's Jack Sharkey on July 21. What will happen? Watch this page Monday for big announcement.

37 YACHTS IN 220-MILE RACE

New London, Ct., June 25 (A.P.)—With the Harvard-Yale crew races out of the way, thirty-seven yachts prepared for a 220-mile race on Long May, N. J. Some were entered in only the one event, while others were entered in two events.

Five schooners arrived here Thursday from New Rochelle to end the seventy-nine-mile first leg of a challenge race for the Brooklyn challenge cup, now held by the New Rochelle Yacht Club. Since the second and last leg of their race was the same as that of the New London-Cape May event, they were to participate also in that.

The New Rochelle Club also ran a special race for boats entered for the Cape May event, with a number of entries.

Following the Cap May race, another 270 miles is scheduled, which will take the craft down the coast and up the Chesapeake to the Gibson Island Club. Last year's race got a start about noon June 29, with about twenty-five boats, including many of the Cape May entries, participating.

Bobby Jones on Time for Sailing

New York, June 25 (A.P.)—Bobby Jones won the first test in defense of his title as open golf champion of Great Britain when his train from the South reached New York on time today and gave him ample margin in which to sail at noon.

Deciding overnight to go to St. Andrews to try to retain the British golf honors, after he had definitely foregone the attempt, the champion was worried all the way from Atlanta to New York, he said, for fear the train would be late. His ship, the Transylvania, was due to sail in less than two hours after the scheduled time of the train's arrival.

"Well, here we are," the champion said as he stepped from the train. "I was a little worried, for after we once got started I didn't want to be disqualified by a ship."

THRILLING GOLF IN OAKLEY TOURNEY

By BILL GRIMES.

A. M. Tewksbury and H. S. Marcy, and J. W. Monahan and Wally Cooledge remained in the Oakley Country Club four ball best ball invitation tournament after the semi-final round was played this morning.

"Junior" Tewksbury and Henry Marcy eliminated Chester Rich and Ed Cole, 2 and 1, and Joe Monahan and Wally Coolidge mowed out a 1 up victory over Jerry Moore and Bill Donnelly, the Woodland pair.

The Tewksbury-Marcy duo of Cole-Rich match was a sizzler. After being even at the turn, the Wellesley pair slipped out in front on the short 13th, but the match was squared again on the 17th when the Charles River pair started a three hole drive which gave them a two hole advantage going to the 17th, which they haived winning the match 2 and 1.

Monahan and Coolidge jumped Moore and Donnelly at the start and were three up going to the sixth. The Woodland pair was two down on the 12th, but they squared the match by winning the 13th hole.

They were one down when Monahan got a four on the 16th, but squared it again on the 17th. A three by Coolidge on the home hole gave his team a victory over Moore and Donnelly, 1 up.

After Tewksbury and Marcy had halved the first hole with Rich and Cole, Marcy got a birdie three on the second, getting a 10-foot putt. Rich and Marcy halved the third with birdie two and the remaining holes to the eighth were all halved. Tewksbury sank a fine 15-footer on the seventh to get his halve.

Cole squared the match on the 11th with a birdie when he dropped a 15-footer.

On the 12th Rich and Cole got down in three, for a one-hole advantage. After halving the 13th, Marcy came through with another birdie, his third of the match, when he sank down a 28-footer on the 14th green.

Summary:

A. M. Tewksbury and H. S. Marcy defeated C. F. Rich and E. T. Cole, 2 and 1.

J. W. Monahan and W. Coolidge defeated G. Moore and W. Donnelly, 1 up.

Taylor Wins Verdict Over Canzoneri

Chicago, June 25 (A.P.)—Bud Taylor's supremacy among the bantamweights was completely restored today, with his victorious repulse of the most desperate challenge he has met since he crowned him the 118-pound champion.

Tony Canzoneri, New York's conqueror for a brief hour, was the victim to Taylor's gloves in their ten-round battle last night at the Stadium and regained Chicago's favor. Taylor a unanimous decision.

The two lads furnished the most thrilling action Chicago fight fans have seen since the sport was legalized. Taylor was a bit flashier in the lessons of their drawn battle last March, Taylor turned the little New Yorker almost constantly. Nearly every round offered a wild swinging melee in the center of the ring, in which Canzoneri generally got the worst of it.

Harvard and Yale Battle at Polo

Harvard meets Yale in the final match of the intercollegiate polo tournament at Rye, N. Y., this afternoon. Despite the presence of Forester Clark in the Crimson lineup, the Blue is a two-to-one favorite.

Clark pulled No. 6 oar in Harvard's victorious varsity crew last Spring, but he has been in training solely for the big race. Now he has turned his attention to polo, and again will battle the Blue.

Harvard will use a new lineup, James Hale, 1927, alumni No. 1, Joseph Cotton will replace Gage Irving at No. 2. Holden White is slated for No. 3, and Tom Hitchcock will be the back. Yale's lineup will be announced with F. C. Baldwin, forward; W. F. C. Guest at No. 2, C. R. Barrett at No. 3, and H. W. Simmons, back.

HOMER ROBERTSON WINS BY TECHNICAL K. O.

Biddeford, Me., June 25.—Pierre Gandon, French champion, lost to Homer Robertson of Boston in the third round, when physicians refused to let him continue because of a badly cut eye. Throughout the three rounds Gandon was holding his own with Robertson.

Young Brown of Biddeford defeated Red Grange in a six-round semi-final, while Young Wadeau of Somersworth had a shade the better of Mike Assaf of Lawrence, Mass., in another six.

Helen Wills May Face Betty Nuthall

Wimbledon, Eng., June 25 (A.P.).—Helen Wills, the only American competitor in the singles today, reached the quarter-finals of the Wimbledon lawn tennis tournament with greater ease than she passed the early rounds.

She overwhelmed Miss Elsie Goldsack of England by the severity of her strolling and won at 6—1, 6—3. The lone game taken by Miss Goldsack in the first set was practically a gift on Helen's part.

The English girl tied at 2—2 in the second set when Miss Wills was inclined to take things rather easily, but when threatened the former American champion promptly ran off four games in a row for the set and match.

William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter reached the quarter finals of the men's doubles, and Tilden paired with Mrs. Molla Mallory safely passed the first round of the mixed doubles. Although Jean Fry and I. G. Collins carried the second set of this match into extra games, the Americans always had the upper hand.

Tilden experimented with his service in both the doubles matches, and put even more speed than usual into his famous "Cannon Ball" delivery.

Jean Lacoste, one of France's "Three Musketeers," reached the quarter finals by beating Jack Condon of South Africa in straight sets, 6—0, 6—3, 6—3.

SEMI-FINAL MATCHES.

The right to enter the semi-finals will be decided in the women's singles by the following matches: Mrs. Kathleen Mountain Godfree (Eng.) vs. Miss Elizabeth Ryan (U. S.); Senorita de Alvarez (Spain) vs. Mrs. Watson (Eng.); Miss Helen Wills (U. S.) vs. Mrs. Peacock (So. Africa); Miss Joan Fry (Eng.) vs. Miss Betty Nuthall (Eng.).

In the men's singles: William T. Tilden (U. S.) vs. Jacques Brugnon (Fr.); Henri Cochet (Fr) vs. Francis T. Hunter (U. S.); Rene Lacoste (Fr.) vs. Karl Kozeluh (Czechoslovakia); Jean Borotra (Fr.) vs. Hans Timmer (Holland).

Betty Nuthall, the 16-year-old school girl who eliminated Mrs. Molla Mallory, American champion, from the women's singles Thursday, faced Mrs. J. Hill in the first of today's matches on the Centre court.

Continuing the excellent form which has marked her rogress through the present tournament, Betty won the first set at 6—3, and then took the second set, for the match, by a like score, putting her in the quarter finals.

WON MATCH EASILY.

The match was a rather easy one for the school girl after strain of her hard and nerve-racking victories over Frauelein Cecilie Aussem of Germany and Mrs. Mallory. She played with the confidence and strategy of a veteran.

Donald Greig, who was forced to retire from yesterday's doubles match against Tilden and Hunter because of an injured knee, abandoned his singles match with Karl Kozeluh of Czechoslovakia today after losing the first set. Kozeluh thus enters the singles quarter finals.

Hans Timmer of Holland also became a quarter finalist by winning his match today.

Jean Lacoste, one of France's "Three Musketeers," reached the quarter finals by beating Jack Condon of South Africa in straight sets, 6—0, 6—3, 6—3.

Betty Nuthall to Play on Wightman Cup Team

London, June 25 (A.P.).—Betty Nuthall, the 16-year-old English schoolgirl who eliminated Mrs. Mallory from the Wimbledon tournament Thursday, was designated today to go to the United States this Summer as a member of the Wightman Cup team.

The other members of the British team which will attempt to regain the trophy were announced as Mrs. Kathleen McKane Godfree, Miss Gwendolin Sperry, Miss E. H. Harvey and Mrs. J. Hill.

The American squad which will defend the Wightman Cup this Summer was announced in March as Mrs. Mallory, Helen Wills, Elizabeth Ryan, Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, donor of the cup, and Martin Zinderstein Jessup. Miss Eleanor Goss, Miss Martha Baynard, Mrs. Charlotte Alexander Chilton and Miss Margaret Blake, Miss Penelope Anderson and Miss Helen Jacobs.

Rickard Undecided on Scene of Title Bout

New York, June 25 (A.P.).—Tex Rickard "hopes" to hold the world heavyweight championship between Gene Tunney and the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Jack Dempsey bout in New York in September, but he has not made up his mind.

Faced with reports from Chicago that the Illinois State Athletic Commission wanted the match for that city, that promoters there were ready and willing to stage the battle with him, and that plans already were under way to hold the fight at Soldier Field with a seating capacity of 150,000, the promoter today announced today that he did not know where the fight would take place.

The "low down" on the situation, from the New York standpoint, came yesterday when Rickard appeared before the State Athletic Commission seeking to charge $27.50 for top price seats at the Dempsey-Sharkey bout. The commission granted his request with the understanding that the fight would not be the same for a championship tilt as staged here.

The boxing decision set aside reports that Rickard would be given permission to boost the price of choice ringside seats to $40, the figure he once set as a top price for a championship struggle.

$27.50 TOP FOR FIGHT.

When asked by the commission if a top of $27.50 would not be "enough if the fight were held in New York," Rickard replied:

"It would have to be, I guess."

Further than that the promoter would not commit himself. "I have not made a decision," he said, "I have several cities in view and, of course, I want to hold the bout in New York, but my plans are not definite."

Rickard admitted he would rather hold Tunney's first title defense in New York than in Chicago, he admitted, where the boxing commission insists that residents of the State alone may act as promoters. He would prefer, too, to stage the match before the same fans who patronized the series of preliminary battles in the elimination tournament that will terminate at the Yankee Stadium July 21 in the choice of either Dempsey or Sharkey as the champion's challenger.

RICKARD IS BAFFLED.

But the financial aspect of the case has Rickard baffled for the moment. Despite the promoter's contention that $1,500,000 "gate," the highest possible at the Stadium under the maximum seat price of $27.50 allowed in New York, still would allow him a profit on the fray.

Although Rickard's guarantee to Tunney for the title defence is not known, the sum probably will reach $750,000, the promoter's announcement that he would not accept 10 per cent., the challenger's "end" in the two previous title matches. The added strength to reports that the former champion has been guaranteed almost half a million dollars for a possible Tunney battle.

Even the lightning calculations of the promoter can find little profit left in a $1,600,000 "house" after state guarantees, and the expenses attendant a championship match, have been met.

"Babe" Spent $9,000 on Sport Writer

Washington, June 25 (A.P.).—A though fame is fleeting, Babe Ruth seems to be determined that it will not flit away from him while he still idly by.

The baseball celebrity in a tax appeal filed at the Treasury has disclosed that during the year 1924 he expended the sum of $9,000 for the purpose of establishing and maintaining good will to the extent of entertaining sports writers, press agents and others in order to cop slightly keep himself before the pul lic."

This item, more than most has had publicity receive in a year, Ruth wants deducted from the deficiency assessment placed on his earning of 1924, which were given at $66 215.34.

Counsel for the famous batsma declared the case had been "tentatively disposed of," but it was set at the board of tax appeal that was recorded as stiff at issue.

Golf Notes

The Bellevue and Marlboro open tournaments wind up today and a large crowd will hack their way around these nine holers, struggling to get down low enough to be rewarded by a trophy. Both clubs are offering extra prizes.

Billy Donnelly and Jerry Moore did a job on the Hopkins family at Oakley. In the morning, the youngster from Woodland eliminated Warren and Bill Hopkins and in the second round put out Steve Hopkins and his partner, Joe Lynch. Donnelly and Moore, who are 14 and 16 years of age, respectively, have established themselves of a four-ball combination at Oakley.

Curled Hands

by Oliver Sandys

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

Lady Meldreth is fascinated by Eddie Wisden, a romantic figure in Pinaud's tea dance resort. Eddie has high hopes of marrying the great lady, and thereby solving his social and financial problems, as soon as she divorces her sporting husband, Lord Meldreth. The money situation in the Wisden home, which is ruled by a grasping mother, becomes exceedingly stringent, especially after Jill, Eddie's popular half-sister, loses her place with a road show. Jill is an idealist and her high standards make her brother rather ashamed of his own scheming conduct. Jill, miles from London, is in grave financial difficulties. Far out on a country road she is overcome by a terrific storm, and seeks refuge in a shack where she faints from fatigue, and is later discovered by Lord Meldreth, whose shooting camp happens to be nearby.

Jill, revived, jokes with her rescuer and Lord Meldreth envisions a pleasant day with the lovely young actress.

Stirred by Jill's youth and beauty, Meldreth embraces and kisses her, just as his servant, Parton, returns and enters the room.

Jill repulses Meldreth, puts him in his place, but forgives his offensive actions, when he apologizes.

Driving her to the train, Meldreth tells Jill she is the only girl in the world for him. They part, a little sorrowfully.

CHAPTER XI.

MELDRETH put Jill into a third-class compartment because she had insisted on his not taking a first-class ticket for her. ("If you do," she said, "it'll only make it harder for me to pay you back, and pay back I must.") So he had let her have her way.

A plump and pretty country girl, under cover of the paper-covered novelette she was reading, observed Jill and her cavalier with interested eyes. Jill, she thought, was exactly like the best heroines of the romances she read omnivorously, only she had a bit more style perhaps, and there was a spirited look about her that made her much more original. The gentleman, she decided, was Jill's lover. They were engaged, and evidently on the eve of parting. Emotion, which they were trying to hide in their high-class way, was in the air.

Jill's companion engrossed her even more than Jill herself. She assimilated every detail of his appearance; admired his well-cut clothes his boots, his tie, his face, his modulated voice, pitched so that only Jill could hear what he said, and also envied the young lady such a distinguished-looking cavalier. She felt quite sorry that they had to part. It was so apparent they did not want to.

Jill said good-bye, and the train moved off. Meldreth stood bare-headed, watching it out of sight. Jill waved her hand instead. Jill groped for her handkerchief.

The country girl put her paper down. Jill's movements had not escaped her. They had the compartment to themselves.

"I've got a clean handkerchief in my bag, miss," she volunteered.

"No, thank you very much," Jill answered. "Isn't it a lovely day?" she said pleasantly.

"Yes, Miss; beautiful."

Jill did not speak again. She wanted to think, to re-live certain moments before she deliberately interred and obliterated them. She felt she needed to understand herself a little better. It was ridiculous to feel regretful because she had said good-bye to almost a stranger. The constriction in her throat was sheer hysteria . . . How could you possibly care deeply about taking farewell of a person you had only known for a few hours? What on earth did it matter that she was not going to see him again? . . And why was she taking such a curious secret delight in thinking of the kiss he had given her, when she had seemed to be so frightfully hurt and indignant? Indignant she had been, but not deeply. For two pins she would have let him repeat it. Yes, she, indifferent Jill, who hadn't any use for men . . . Oh, Jehoshaphat! She had been near enough to drifting then . . . Only twenty-five years of self-discipline had helped her to keep her head . . .

"He kissed you—and you—didn't mind! He kissed you—and you—liked it!"

The jolting of the train seemed to hammer out the monotonous rhythm, mischievously mocking her.

"He kissed you—and—you—liked—it!"

Jill gave herself a shake. Far better talk to her companion than this. She could see the girl was dying to converse. She had closed her novelette and was evidently waiting for a favorable opportunity.

Jill smiled at her.

The girl made another venture, more personal this time.

"You are lucky, miss," she said enviously.

"Lucky? Why?" asked Jill.

"To have such a lovely man! To be goin' to marry 'im and walk down the church all dressed in white with a veil and blossoms, and him beside you in a frock coat and spats, with the organ pealing and brides-maids behind"

Jill laughed.

"Oh, but you're altogether wrong" she said. "I'm not engaged to that gentleman. I hardly know him. Whatever made you think we were lovers?"

The girl colored.

"I thought you'd got that look, both of you. I'm always imagining things about folks, makin' up tales about them in my mind and now they'll go on and end up; and you and the gentleman looked like two people out of a book come to life. It he ain't spoke yet, miss, depend upon it he will."

Jill shook her head defiantly.

"I'm sure he won't. He's married," she said. "He's not even likely to meet again."

The girl's face clouded.

"Do you think it's wrong to care for a married man, miss?" she asked hesitantly.

"It can't lead to anything, can it?" answered Jill bluntly. "What makes you ask?"

"Because I've got a friend, and we're very fond of each other, and he's married," the girl spoke hurriedly, "and I don't know what to do. He's pressin' me all the time, and I can't doubt he loves me, and him and his wife will never come together, because she broke up his home and sold everything and ran off with someone else. And now he's worked hard and got it all together again and a good position, and no one in the world to make him happy. And us lovin' 'im we're nearly torn with longin'. But if I left home like that, there's Mum and Dad would break their hearts, and if I don't go, there's his life had all waste, and perhaps he'll turn to some bad girl, men not havin' any starin' power for livin' alone. It's makin' me thin, the worry of it all, and I was that fat! I'm goin' to write to the editress of a paper I take to ask her wha' she'd do in my place, because I seem to be beyond thinking for myself. Perhaps you could advise me, miss!"

Jill felt specially qualified to advise. She and this girl were sisters under their skin, after all.

"I shouldn't write to anybody about it," she said decidedly. "If you think at all, you'll see it's all wrong in itself."

"But why, miss? If he loves me and honors me as if I was his true wife in the sight of heaven, and we was happy together, where's the harm? That's what he says over and over again, till I can't tell right from wrong or black from white. Should we be sinnin'?"

Jill felt out of her depth now.

"My dear," she said, I can't tell you that. But you'd be up against everybody on earth, scandalizing some people and hurting those who love you most, like your father and mother; so it can't be right, can it? I'd cut it out, if I were you, and marry someone I could start dead straight with, so long as he was nice and very fond of me and I could respect him."

"That'll be plain Jack Stebbing," said the girl with conviction. She added ruefully: "But he ain't got a way with him, like Tom. I won der if you'd say the same to me if you knew what it was to have a kiss like Tom's on your mouth not a courtin' kiss, but the kind that burns you up. I've never felt the same since. One bloke makes me feel like a blanc mange that's gone too stiff—that's Jack—and the other like a jelly, wobblin' all over the place—and that's Tom. I suppose I'll have to decide some day soon, or I'll fall away to a shadow."

"I should decide now," said Jill. The train slowed into a station.

The girl collected her parcels.

A young man was scanning the windows eagerly—a yokel with a tight bouquet of peonies and an honest face to match.

"There's your Jack, I think," said Jill intuitively.

"Why, so it is! He must have guessed I was comin' by this train." The girl looked flattered and not unpleased. "He's got a fond heart, poor Jack. What with flowers and wantin' about, always so patient, hopin' I'll turn!" She sighed regretfully. "But he don't know how to kiss! It's all over and done with and another begun, instead of the same one going on until you're beg gin' for breath. You wouldn't know what I mean if you hadn't had it."

Jill did know . . . she knew since this morning. Yesterday she would have despised this simple, garrulous girl who could discuss her intimate affairs so openly with a complete stranger. Today, she felt almost drawn to her. She was human after all . . . Jill was human, too. . . . She, too, had known a kiss than went on and on until her breath went and her lips were bruised. . . . She could even feel that ghostly sensation still, faintly warming them, the kiss she was going to forget—that she must forget if she was to remain captain of her soul.

"Goodby," she said to the girl as she got out. "Take Jack. I think he looks a dear."

"Thank you, miss. Goodby. And I think I will. Dad and Mum would be very pleased."

The girl stepped on to the platform. The youth almost ran to meet her, annexing her parcels, thrusting his flowers upon her, and a shy, but cocky salute as well.

The train settled into its rush towards London. And again the jolted rhythm of the refrain that had come into Jill's mind tentalized afresh because it was so true. . . .

"He kissed you—and you—didn't mind! He kissed you—and—you loved it!" . . .

Precious Gifts

Love That Must Be Bribed Is Not Worth Having

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

HE BRINGS her the most precious gift life has to offer—the tender, lasting devotion of his heart. And if she is a wise girl, she knows that she is indeed rich to possess it. She will ask nothing more of the world

But if she is only world wise—if she reckons her wealth in material things—and has nothing of the true, deep wisdom of the real woman—she will ask for more. And she will get infinitely less.

On—she may have diamond bracelets to deck her arms and emeralds and rubies for her grasping fingers, and pearls to wind about her white throat. But sooner or later, he will realize that affection which must be bribed is not worth having and then she will lose the most precious gift of all.

She will be poor, indeed, alone with her sparkling gifts. For love will have gone from her life. And he will never return until she learns to welcome him for his own sake, for the spiritual gifts he alone can bring her. Cupid is wise. He knows when his welcome is real. And he will not linger where he is not wanted for himself alone.

'Shackled Souls'; Mark Writes His Wife to Learn Truth

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER 40.

SHE needed him here—standing at her side. Needed his hand touching hers.

He came. His eyes, worshiping, humble, uncertain, went immediately seeking hers. His lips moved pleadingly. Yet he didn't speak. He, too, needed. He was like a boy needing her. She flung her head back, he said softly: "Mark——" and stole close to him.

She tried to think of Mark and his unhappiness with his wife. But sometimes when she would be waiting for Mark—when she would be walking restlessly about the living room—she had to fight against a dread—a chill, forbidding dread of a time when Claire, not loving Mark, might not give him up.

And when she went to Jackie's home, when she played with the little girl, she often found herself on the verge of tears.

Once when they were having dinner, Jackie spoke to her three times. She heard, but vaguely. She did not answer. For she was lost in a dream. Mark's image was in her mind and the echo of a thing he said with such kindling tenderness "Oh, Roen—I so love you!"

"For the third time, Roen, did you play golf today? Why the lapse? You must be in love"

Her eyes covered—stricken—the color left her face.

And sometimes sitting before the fire she grew quiet with a smile that was too steadfast on her lips. She was seeing, in a momentary flash, that low chair where Mark sat, empty.

"What is troubling you, Roen, dear?"

"Nothing! Nothing!" For she would not bicker with Destiny.

She leaned over and ran her hand gaily, tenderly, through his soft, black hair.

"Nothing troubles me, Mark. Only sometimes I wonder if you've said all the things I keep hearing. Or if I've imagined them. I'm so glad you've said them, Mark."

"Truly, Roen? Sometimes I wonder about this."

"No—never wonder. Only speak again—" She took his face in her hands and laughed softly and kissed him.

His heart swelled. He found her wondrous in her wistful sweetness—incredibly dear. More and more so.

She was more beautiful—infinitely—than his dream. She was MINE. Nothing would ever alter this. And this fact wiped out the Past, that only in an external way belonged to him. All that was real—all that was living in his heart and spirit was Roen's.

He sat in his deserted home steeped in the dream of her—in the fame of her—in the wonder that this had come to pass.

The image of Claire passed across his rhapsodies. He viewed it quietly—cold—distant.

She would not suffer. Only her pride would suffer. He would provide well for her.

In these ponderings, there came sometimes a disquieting sense of alarm. Claire was right in her ideas. She had a strong conventional bias which she interpreted as her deeply spiritual nature.

She might object—she might fight him.

But he mastered this fear. No—she was too proud to fight. She would release him with hurt, quiet reproach.

Yet he wondered how he might broach the subject. If Claire imagined that he was doing wrong—if she felt it was her duty as his wife to save him—to hold him fast to his marriage—if she took this attitude then she would come flying home without a moment's delay . . .

He resented hotly the necessity of asking permission from a third party—an outsider. Such he now regarded her . . . She had been an outsider nearly thirteen years.

And when his thoughts reached this confused irrational state he would decide to go away with Roen to remain with her whether he could get release or not—

Late in April her letters brought him a flare of hope. She was in love with Europe. She spoke again and again of the charm of Parisian life—the fascination of its culture.

She wrote, "One could live well here, Mark for $75 a month—that is, if there were content to live richly but without ostentation. Yesterday we met a young professor who formerly taught in Harvard. He is here with his wife and two children Their living expenses, even including the laundry and the maid, are less than $3 a day—for the entire family.

"Mark—how thrilling it would be if we should take up our abode here . . ."

And later she asked if he would mind if she remained six weeks longer. The Martins were planning a trip to Norway not included in her original schedule.

He wrote back immediately telling her by all means to take the trip.

He said: "Claire, would you really like to stay on in Paris indefinitely? Tell me, are the charms sufficient to compensate for my absence? Don't evade, Claire. I shan't be hurt . . . For I know the truth. . . . Wouldn't you be willing to stay indefinitely without me?"

He would be able to tell from her answer her exact feeling. Even if she evaded He waited her letter with a seething, almost wild impatience.

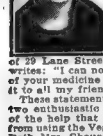
TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of St. Joseph, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.



Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been wa'ting for from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe

By Daniel Defoe

When the sailors wandered off, leaving their four unarmed prisoners, Crusoe approached them. They were the captain and first mate of the vessel and a passenger. The drunken crew had mutinied and brought the three over to leave them. Crusoe armed them and with his aid they defeated the mutineers in a battle.

With the mutiny quelled, the captain was ready to set sail. He offered to take Crusoe back to England and the latter accepted, because he might not have another chance for years. He knew that when the Spaniard and his friends returned from the mainland they could live peaceably on the island.

Friday accompanied his master to England and always remained his faithful servant. Crusoe found that his plantations in Brazil had made him rich during his long absence. Some time after he married and had three children. But he still retained a longing to revisit his island.

The island is now called Tabago and you can find it on the map. In 1694 Crusoe returned to it and found that the Spaniard and his friends had established a colony there. Some voyagers from Brazil had joined them. After a happy visit Crusoe went back to England to spend the rest of his days. (The End.)

DAILY SHORT STORY

A MARRIAGE EXPERIMENT

By Eudora Ramsay Richardson

ELIZABETH knew that the abbreviated Liz suited her far better than the ornate name with which she had been christened. She had, in fact, always suspected the homely quality of her nature, but little knowledge of a number of the Breckenridge friends she was perfectly sure that she should have married a rich wife whose name was Flann and who worked on the police force.

It was to Sue Camden, her best friend, that Liz confided her troubles.

"I'm only a wife 6 in the evenings," Liz wailed. "All day I'm expected to sit with my feet on a silk cushion."

Sue was frankly perplexed.

"With this big house and two babies, it seems to me you'd find enough to do," she countered.

"Mamsy nursed all the little Breckenridges, and Clara, my cook is her daughter who knows far better than I how Breckenridges should be fed. Ellen, who looks after the cars and garden was Mother Breckenridge's second man before he was a gracious gift to me. I haven't even a servant problem to relieve the monotony of idleness."

Sue Camden was a picture of limp unbelief.

"Isn't that glorious?" she asked. "Suppose you had three children to dress every evening, a school lunch to fix, a husband's clothes to find, cooking, darning, seven meals a day to prepare and only a temperamental colored woman to come twice a week if nothing more interesting turns up."

"I'd love it," Liz replied casually. "Then Woolfolk would be dependent on me. I'd be of some use to him and the babies. Honestly, Sue, if I didn't love them so much I believe I wouldn't care."

"It's a strange world," Sue remarked unsympathetically. "Why don't you try giving the servants a holiday?"

"Mother Breckenridge would send me substitutes. She's going to look after dear Woolly, you know."

Nevertheless, an idea had been planted within Liz's pretty head. The next morning when her breakfast tray came in, mutinous thoughts were surging through her brain. There she sat amid her lace boudoir pillows, her piquant face as pink as the shimmering bed jacket she wore, hating the pale green tray, the transparent French China, the orange juice iridescent through the crystal, the crisp bacon, the flaky biscuits, the tiny silver breakfast service.

From the nursery above she could hear the patter of baby feet. Downstairs her husband was reading the paper over his breakfast. No one wanted her at 8:30 in the morning. Why should an intelligent, capable person tolerate a life like this? She would let the servants go.

Leaving the breakfast untouched, Liz scrambled out of bed and into her clothes. She was completely dressed when Woolfolk came in to kiss her goodby.

"Must have a shopping program for today?" he smiled with a husband's fine tolerance for a pretty wife.

"Oh, I'm going to be awfully busy." Liz smiled, lifting her face for the kiss.

When she had seen Woolfolk's roadster turn out of the drive, Liz went down to the kitchen. It was clear that the servants were amazed to have their breakfast disturbed.

"Here's a week's wage in advance for the three of you," Liz announced, "and five dollars extra for each if you'll do as I say. Get the dishes washed and then clear out for a vacation. Don't let Mr. Breckenridge's mother know anything about it, and don't ask any questions."

Three pairs of eyes rolled in three pairs of black sockets.

"Is you plumb crazy, Miss Y'ung?" demanded Mammy.

"Maybe I am," Liz laughed, "which is incidentally none of your business."

In an hour Liz and the children were quite alone in the big, lovely home. Liz sang as she made up the beds and wielded the mop. She sang as she prepared lunch with two little tots always under her feet. She sang as she put the babies to bed for the afternoon and hurried to start the evening meal. She moulded charlotte into delectable shapes. She packed in ice a gay little cheesy salad and made frivolous sandwiches. It was the kind of dinner the cook did not approve and the kind Liz adored. Then she put the children's supper cereal in the steamer and returned to the nursery. The babies were awake. So she dressed them and took them out to play.

It was 6:30 and the babies were again asleep when Liz heard the greeting honk of Woolfolk's horn. In a moment two men entered the hall. Heavens, there was to be a guest for dinner, and Liz was still wearing the dark-blue dress in which she had done her day's work. Nervously she slid pop-overs into the oven. Woolfolk called her and she answered bravely. In a moment he appeared at the kitchen door.

"Where's the servants?" he demanded.

"I—I gave them a vacation," Liz faltered.

"What—" Woolfolk began and then stopped too aghast for words. "You can't serve dinner when I've brought a guest!"

"Other women do," Liz replied brightly. "Let's try it."

In disgust Woolfolk Breckenridge walked out of the kitchen.

There was no denying that the dinner was an ordeal. Woolfolk, who expected the menu to run from hors-d'oeuvre through Roquefort scarcely touched the trivial dishes set before him. Liz chatted with forced gayety with the business acquaintance her husband had brought home, but Woolly was morosely silent.

At ten Mother Breckenridge telephoned.

"Woolfolk tells me that the servants are having a vacation," she said with the icy politeness of the Breckenridges. "I'm sending a nurse and cook this afternoon. In order to do his work, my son must have a smoothly-running household."

So that was that. When she worked, Liz was not being useful. Woolly must have the environment he preferred. It didn't matter about her.

Then Sue Camden ran in.

"What does this mean—an apron on Liz?" she demanded. "The cleaning woman came, so I ran out for a breath of air."

"Oh, Sue," Liz sobbed. "I did let the servants go, and I've made an awful muddle of usefulness. Woolly wants an establishment—not a home."

"Then get a job," replied the practical Sue.

"You know Woolly. He would feel disgraced for life."

"Then leave him if you're unhappy."

Liz was sobbing into her cook's gingham apron.

"I'd be unhappier—because I love Woolly—I love him—I love the children."

"Then I suppose you'd better wipe your eyes and make the best of it," Sue answered.

"I suppose I had." Liz agreed, obeying quite literally.

FAMOUS ACTRESSES

MAXINE ELLIOTT was heralded as the world over as one of the most beautiful women and as one of the most talented actresses. She was born in Rockland, Me., and educated in the Notre Dame Academy at Roxbury, Mass. Her father, who was a sea captain, took her on a voyage to South America and Spain after she finished school.

Upon her return to this country Miss Elliott, who was then about sixteen years old, decided to go on the stage. She wanted a career and as she started for New York. She succeeded in getting a part as a "super" in A. M. Palmer's company, and then, because of her beauty, was given an engagement with T. Henry French in "The Voyage of Suzette."

Her first role was Felicia Cunningville in "The Middleman" in E. S. Willard's company. Also, in the company she played Virginia Fleetwood in "John Needham's Double," Beatrice Selwyn in "An Ideal Husband" and Lady Golding in "The Professor's Love Story."

Miss Elliott then created the role of Violet Woodman in "The Prodigal Daughter." Following this she played Kate Malcolm in "Sister Mary" with Julia Arthur. She also joined Rose Coghlan, appearing as Dora in "Diplomacy" and Mrs. Allenby in "A Woman of No Importance."

She then became a member of Augustin Daly's company, with which she went to London. Her great beauty attracted much attention. Miss Elliott's debut in the Daly company was in the title role of "A Heart of Ruby." Her dramatic talents were now well established. She played Silvia in "Two Gentlemen of Verona," her first Shakespearean role.

Miss Elliott then became Nat Goodwin's wife and leading woman. She went to London with him, appearing in "The Cowboy and the Lady" and "An American Citizen." She also played Alice Adams to his Nathan Hale and scored a tremendous success.

Those who saw her in "Myself—Bettina," which brought out every phase of her charming personality! "When We Were Twenty-one," "Her Own Way," "Trimmer in Scarlet," "Under the Greenwood Tree" and "Forget Me Not," never will forget their orderful dramatic talent, the wondrous beauty and majestic dignity of Maxine Elliott.

She will also be remembered always as the beautiful angel of mercy in the World War. She joined the American Red Cross, drove her own automobile on the battlefields and picked up the wounded.

Upon her retirement from the stage Miss Elliott became the reigning beauty of London society.

EFFICIENCY IN SCHOOL

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

WHEN Miss Efficiency first took charge of the fifth grade in a certain public school, the pupils were way below the standard set for fifth grade pupils. Miss Lackadaisical, the girl who had failed as their instructor, told the new teacher that she had never been such a dull set of children in her life. "They haven't a brain in their heads," is what she actually said.

But Miss Efficiency knew better. She had taught too many classes to believe any such statement as that. She had learned by experience that in every class there is about the same number of dullards, the same number of exceptionally bright children and the same number of children with enough intelligence to make good in life. She also knew that their progress depended largely upon the interest in their studies that the teacher aroused.

Among other methods that Miss Efficiency used for arousing interest in lessons was the grading of work just as soon after the work was done as possible. If the weather permitted she sat out on the playgrounds at recess and graded papers. She allowed the children to gather around her and each to take his own paper as it was marked.

Sometimes there was a lesson in dictation, which meant that the teacher read a sentence and the children wrote it on their tablets. These exercises were graded in the presence of the class and given back for immediate corrections.

In geography, in history and in hygiene the teacher often gave what she called "a running review." That meant that she stated questions and the children gave answered in one or two written words. The papers were exchanged across the aisle, then as the teacher gave the answers, the papers were marked. Because of her own attitude and example and kindly supervision the children soon reached the point where they graded each other's papers with absolute fairness.

In the course of a few weeks the pupils let that class knew that the work each one did would receive the mark it merited. They also knew that just as soon as possible the grades would be given them, and they could see what they had done. To be able to see for themselves the result of their effort is a great incentive for children to study.

Justice and fairness are, of all things, the most essential in securing cooperation from pupils. They never mind firm discipline nor strict regulations if they can be sure of absolute justice. If the teacher or the parent who allows her own feelings to interfere with giving absolute justice to her charges will find herself held in contempt—if she be unfortunate enough to learn the truth.

MEDBURY SAYS---BY JOHN P. MEDBURY

SEVERAL large cities have started a crusade and are driving all the crooks out of town. This is showing them too much courtesy; the authorities ought to make them walk.

IN Chicago, the patrol wagons are so crowded that a burglar has to have a pull in order to get a seat.

IT'S better to be arrested early in the morning and avoid the rush.

ONE pickpocket lives out in the suburbs and uses the Black Maria for a bus.

HE rides in the patrol wagon so often that he joined the automobile club.

THE city is going to make him buy the license plates next year.

HE'S very fond of motoring and has traveled from coast to coast in these back door sedans.

EVERY police station is a tourist camp.

HE was disappointed this year because there weren't any patrol wagons in the auto show.

HE wanted his folks to see the last word in sheriffs' vans.

HE was mortified to death in Cleveland the other day. They took him to jail in the dog catcher's cart.

HE says he wishes he were back in Chicago, where a burglar has some standing.

IN Ohio, a crook is practically nobody.

THIS fellow is very musical and he'd rather hear the gong of a patrol wagon than listen to a symphony orchestra.

HE was brought up in these vehicles. He used to ride around in them instead of baby carriages.

HE heard his first lullaby from a cop.

HE cut is teeth on a night stick.

A PAIR of handcuffs was his rattle.

CRIME is becoming so general that the only way we can keep our jails from getting over-crowded is to release the crooks and lock up all the honest people.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE are five kinds of marriages: Boy marriages, unhappy marriages and marriages which are merely uncomfortable.

Marriage is not just a chance to give up a job and sleep until lunch time; but a life apprenticeship in the art of having to do without most of the things you want, and to put up with a lot of things you don't want.

* * *

Every truly happy marriage is a "Mutual Admiration Society;" and I would as soon hear the eyelashes from a baby as tear the veil from the eyes of a blindly adoring husband or wife.

* * *

Just now it is the fashion for girls to scoff at the idea of marriage and to sing the joys of the "jolly business life!" But, to most of them, "business" is either the shortest cut to matrimony, or the quickest escape from it—into another marriage.

* * *

In some sophisticated circles, marriage is merely the little interval between the wedding-day and the divorce. Most modern marriages appear to be built for speed rather than for endurance.

* * *

But in spite of all this, marriage is not a failure. Lots of husbands and wives are failures; but so are lots of painters, poets and writers. This is usually because the artist, the author, the husband or the wife, did not put his heart into his job, or else had no talent for it.

* * *

Some people are born with a genius for marriage. With others, it is like vaccination; no matter how often they may try it, it simply won't "take."

* * *

Going through the wedding ceremony doesn't make you "a married man," or a "wife," any more than going through college makes you intelligent or "educated." Lots of people who have been "wedded" are not more than one-half of one per cent. MARRIED—and the other ninety-nine and a half per cent. pure old maid or bachelor.

There should be some sort of honorary degree for the woman who has made a success of marriage. For any woman who has succeeded in making a man happy, sufficiently loyally becomes a master of arts and a doctor of philosophy!

* * *

You can't tell anything more about the length of a honeymoon than you can about the life of a flower. Some of them are ephemeral, some perennial, and some are "everlasting."

* * *

The mind makes its own Heaven; but a flirtatious husband or a nagging wife can surely make a little Hell. The path to Paradise or to Purgatory is still strewn with cut flowers, rice and old shoes!

* * *

And yet—and yet, there is only one thing in life more important than marriage. And that is LOVE!

LINDY ON GUARD SINCE FRENCH GIRL'S KISS

"MY PLANE AND I—"

From the lips of Lindy, himself—

By WILLIAM HILMAN

Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Loneliness and hard work are poor preparations for such intimate and personal association Lindbergh received in the four weeks that followed his historic flight.

No man was less prepared for the madness and the worship of the masses than this blonde, bashful youth.

"I do not deserve all this," Lindy would repeat time and again.

"If I had known what was to happen to me after the flight," he said one day, "I would never have started."

He played his new role with characteristic modesty and self-deficient chaffing at any attempt to overemphasize Lindbergh, the man, instead of Lindbergh, the aviator.

He was startled to think people should be interested in his personality, his life, his whims. He was upset when people actually fought to shake his hand, to touch him in their homes, to send him gifts.

LOST PATIENCE

But when they began to kiss him, when feminine hearts began to flutter, Lindy lost patience.

Only the Prince of Wales had known such popularity in this country. But the Prince of Wales, the heir of another tradition and another outlook on life, could accept with complacency this adoration.

Lindy never knew much about the opposite sex, never cared for the company of women, and was always bashful and shy in their presence.

"My pals out in San Francisco always used to say of me," Lindy said one day, "'where there are women around, Lindy ain't.'"

"I had much more time for company," Lindy told me, "I always was working. I never danced. I never learned to dance because I was too busy. I don't like to talk about women. That's too complicated a subject to explain to me."

Lindy's comparisons often toll that they would find him hard to go out with girls, make "dates" and attend parties. Lindy was always busy studying or working on his plane. Even during the "gypsy" and "barnstorming" hours of country fairs as a "circus" flyer, Lindy never "went out."

Lindy has all the equipment, but the mental attitude, of a mamiee hero. He has all the manliness, the lunhoneyness, to explain that ever rrshed by phenomenon throughout the history of civilization, feminine worship, feminine frenzy over a hero or public figure.

AVOIDS QUESTIONS

No sooner had he reached Paris than his troubles began.

From every corner of France gifts from female worshippers showered in on him.

"I haven't been able to read all the letters," Lindy said, "I suppose many of them are 'mash' notes."

And with genuine, unmistakable naivete he added:

"I suppose they do send mash notes to those in the public eye, don't they?"

"To gentlemen always prefer blondes?" he was asked on the first day in Paris.

"Prefer them blonde, some brunette," he answered. "I don't intend to quarrel with any once tastes."

"Are you engaged?" he was asked.

"Neither engaged or intend to be engaged," Lindy flanked back.

"Were you ever in love?" was another question.

This was too much for Lindy and all he would say was "Huh." After that he confined his answers to "yes" or "no" or "I don't know."

LOST HIS SHYNESS

But when asked what he thought of women as aviators, he felt he had been asked a reasonable question.

"I think women aviators are as capable as men," he said. "I see no reason why a woman shouldn't fly the Atlantic. They have just as much stamina and nerve as men. They are just as smart as men."

In his attitude toward elderly women he asked him questions of aviation. Lindbergh was a revelation. He lost his bashfulness, his shyness.

He was an eager instructor when Queen Elizabeth of Belgium asked him questions about his plane and his flight. He spent a half-hour pointing out the different parts of his plane.

Then one day Lindy was kissed probably for the first time in his life.

It came unexpectedly. He was in the centre of several hundred French deputies who had acclaimed him with the same fervor, noise in the streets had done.

HAPPIEST GIRL

Out of the crowd there suddenly darted a pretty little French girl, a round faced gascone type. She came toward him. He had no warning as to what she intended doing. She put out her arms, pulled his head down and kissed him squarely on the lips.

He blushed a deep red. His eyes flashed. He fumbled with his hands. He didn't know what to say, but seeing the amused French statesmen and politicians laughing and holding their sides, Lindy laughed in unconvincing laughs.

From that day on, Lindy was always on his guard.

When he returned to the American Embassy, there was bitterness in his voice when he said:

"My God, they've spoiled the kissing stage. I'm through."

But Cdette Pointier, the girl who had kissed him, was the happiest girl in France.

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 1. The Queen of Hearts is not taken on the first trick, since the Club suit must be played for and it West has the Ace of Clubs and secures the lead with it while still retaining a Heart in his hand, he can lead through the Heart Jack. Holding up the King-Jack combination in this instance would result in South continuing to holding up an Ace until one of the adversaries has no more of the suit.

Tricks 11-13. East having discarded two good Hearts is clearly marked with the Queen of Spades. By throwing him in with the Queen of Diamonds he is forced to lead from the Queen of Spades up to the Ace-Jack.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper. Inclose self-addressed stamped envelope.

FOOT ENTRIES MUST BE IN BY THURSDAY

This last weekend before the close of the Boston Evening American's contest will provide a good opportunity for late comers to enter the competition. The contest must positively close at midnight, June 29.

Every woman in New England is eligible to compete for the title of Miss New England of the Perfect Feet of which the Boston Evening American's contest winner will have every reason to boast.

In addition to the title, enviable enough as it is, the winner will be given a gold medal emblematic of her victory. Further, her Cinderella feet will be fitted to an exquisite pair of models colored Red, the perfect foot that expert craftsmen can fashion. Add to all this a purse of $100 in gold and you can judge the honor and profit for the winner.

A second prize will be $25 in gold and a pair of hosiery, where ankle pumps, deftly trimmed in alligator, with a silver medal.

A third prize will be $15 in gold, a bronze medal and a shoe pair of models white kidskin shoes, as exquisitely patterned as shoes can be.

For fourth prize there will be $10 in gold and an order on a prominent shoe dealer for a fashionable pair of the finest quality shoes.

To be eligible for the cash prizes will all be an order on a prominent Boston retailer for a pair of finest quality shoes.

There is only one rule of eligibility to the contest. It is this simple sending of a photograph of your feet with your name and address to the Contest Editor. The photograph must be of both feet, or knee length, so you deem will better picture the beauty of your feet.

At the close of the contest on June 30 expert anatomists will assist the editor in eliminating the thousands of photographs to a mere ninety.

From this ninety will be chosen the twenty-five prize winners, who will be selected in person at a gala trade exposition staged by the Kid Leather Manufacturers' Association during the Boston Shoe Fair on July 5, 6 and 7.

To those who care to avail themselves of the unlimited facilities of the Boston Evening American's photographic studio, the Contest Editor extends a welcome in the name of the staff photographers. Those men have agreed to help in any way they can and will be glad to make pictures of all who visit the studio morning, afternoon or evening.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON JUNE 25, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Be Proud of Your HEIGHT, Girls and Boys

Stand Straight, Don't Stoop

LADY LETTICE LYGON, "TALLEST GIRL IN BRITISH SOCIETY."

The other day a tall schoolboy ran away from home, overwhelmed with shame at being called "'elephant" by his companions. The boys that used this nickname were foolish and cruel. And the big boy that allowed himself to be annoyed by it was foolish also.

There are thousands of tall boys and girls that stoop over, trying to conceal their height because they are ASHAMED of it when they ought to be PROUD of it.

Nothing could be more foolish than to bend over, pressing in your lungs with the ribs squeezed against them, merely because you happen to be taller than boys and girls around you.

Stand straight, breathe deep, be proud of your muscles and be proud of YOUR HEIGHT.

This picture, exhibited in the London Royal Academy this year, shows Lady Lettice Lygon, who is the tallest girl in British society. Well over six feet tall, she towers above men, head and shoulders above a majority of women.

But she stands STRAIGHT, is cheerful, enjoys life and knows that the man that gets her will be a very lucky individual.

Amherst's New Pilot

Storm Over and Harmony Restored, Pease Takes Command Serenely

There is more interest in Amherst College than there was before a certain young former Governor removed from Massachusetts to Washington, and so the qualifications of the new President of the College will be subjected to careful scrutiny.

By all accounts, Arthur Stanley Pease will bear most careful examination.

He is a "shy and silent" man, we are told, "reticent and retiring." Although he came to Amherst as a professor three years ago, he is "not well-known."

President Pease is "one of the foremost classicists in the country," but although eminent in the classics he is "not undistinguished in the sciences."

Alexander Meiklejohn's tenure at Amherst now is but a memory. Meiklejohn was "liberal and radical." Professor Pease's elevation is held to signify that the emphasis is to be placed upon "sound learning."

The great majority of New Englanders have not been concerned about the struggle for control at Amherst, which, as one reviews it after the lapse of four years, does not appear to have been much of a struggle, after all.

What WILL impress the public is that President Pease is a native son; that his father was a Connecticut minister, and that his grandmother, Mrs. Claudius B. Pease, as Mary W. Chapin, was for thirteen years the principal of Mt. Holyoke Seminary.

If the new president shuns the brass band and the press agent, and remains in the sheltered avenues of sound learning, as there is no reason to doubt he will, he may look forward to some such happy closing of his labors for Amherst as has attended the retirement of George Daniel Olds, after thirty-six years as professor, dean and president. TEN THOUSAND sons of Amherst united in making "Georgie" Olds a present of a new house, which will be built to order on Hitchcock Road while Dr. and Mrs. Olds are abroad.

There was a gift for you! and you can ask some elderly man of your acquaintance how much MORE it is worth, at seventy, to hold such a place in the affections of any army of younger men that they call you "Georgie."

WHY will great scholars give their lives to teaching when, in the Land of Easy Millions, they MIGHT be piling up wealth?

"Georgie" Olds gave at least a hint at the answer.

"The finest tribute that can be paid to an old teacher," he said, "is found in the achievements of those he has taught.

"By this means the teacher attains a sort of immortality."

Well, if Lindbergh is a FLYING fool, perhaps there are TEACHING fools, also. There MUST be, else there would be no colleges.

Bless, kind Heaven! ALL the fools, the flying fools and the teaching fools and all the others, who save the world from becoming half shop and half counting-room.

NO DANGER YET OF TOO MANY FOLKS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

PROFESSOR E. A. ROSS, of Wisconsin, says that the earth's population will multiply itself by 32 by 2027. Then the population of the world will be sixty billion, instead of 1,900,000,000, as now. That is only one hundred years away and will swiftly come around.

Ever since the days of Malthus, people have been alarmed by the rapid increase of population in the world.

As far as we can see, the number of people is multiplying more and more rapidly. There are no famines now and the casualties in war are smaller. The birth rate continues to gain upon the death rate.

But we need not be alarmed. The entire population of the world could now be taken care of by the State of Texas.

We are learning more and more how to maintain human life more easily. As ye harness electricity and utilize the power of streams, more and more food sustenance and other articles of human necessity are being manufactured.

I once lived in a community where some men had very small farms and others farms of three or four thousand acres. I asked a small farmer once, whose name was Bill Johnson, just how much land a man needed to make a living on. His answer was characteristic. He said:

"About all he needs is room enough to stand on if he's got sense enough."

We have not begun yet to make inroads upon the tremendous supply of life found in the seas.

We have just scratched the fertility of the tropics.

Besides this, governments are just learning that the best thing they can do for their respective countries is to turn water on their desert lands, and otherwise improve the productive area of the land.

The trend of progress seems to be in the way of making the sustenance of human life more abundant.

The sixty billion people of 2027 will not only greatly outnumber the present population, but they will be a great deal more intelligent and know a lot more about making a living.

FORMER MAYOR J. EDWARD BARRY of CAMBRIDGE is still active in the affairs of that city. His co-operation with the business and professional men in their efforts to have Inman square enlarged by pushing some of the buildings back thirty feet is favorably commented on by BENJAMIN HOSEMAN of the Cambridge City Planning Board.

FAME

CITY CENSOR JOHN N. CASEY is a quiet man. He makes little or no noise about his work. Yes from Toronto, Harry M. Woodcock, chief theatre censor, sent this note:

Dear Mr. Casey:—This will introduce W. B. Hopkins, one of our best known and most highly esteemed barristers. I have asked him to call upon you and ask you for any literature regarding your good work, methods, standards, etc., which might help me. During the seven years I have been theatre censor in Toronto I have frequently heard of you and I fancy that we are very much of the same mind on the subject of keeping the stage as clean as possible."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HAVE you ever hated your husband?

Ruth Snyder is in the death cell today because she hated hers.

The police records say that Ruth Snyder helped Henry Judd Gray murder Albert Snyder on March 7. But she began that murder long ago.

She began it when the first sting of irritation stirred in her heart against the man to whom her life was tied.

I wonder what caused that first sting?

Some petty, domestic squabble, such as all have known.

He growled because dinner wasn't ready. She snapped because he hadn't picked up his B. V. D.'s from the bathroom floor. He lost his temper because she had forgotten to tell him of an important telephone call. She flew into a tantrum because he snubbed her girl friend.

Some trivial thing like that.

And afterwards they laughed and kissed and made up—and forgot it. Or thought they forgot it.

But life didn't forget it.

Life makes a record of all things—small or great. Each act, however slight, starts its inevitable train of consequences.

That first tiny quarrel started something. A tiny wound where resentment festered, a focus of infection. A hidden menace that struck in its roots and spread while they went on their thoughtless way.

It was a little easier to squabble the next time.

They had broken through their first illusions.

They had found they could squabble.

So they squabbled again—a little more bitterly.

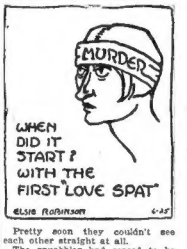
Again and again—

And each time they squabbled they changed a little in each other's eyes. Each time they stripped a little of the glamour and mystery and beauty from themselves.

To the rest of the world they appeared the same.

But they began to appear distorted to each other. They began to be wrapped around with hateful associations.

They did not stop to reason it all out. They did not stop to connect those "unimportant little squabbles" with their growing indifference and disillusion. They did not realize that those "little love spats" were distorting their vision—making them seem monstrous and malicious.



Pretty soon they couldn't see each other straight at all.

The squabbles had ceased to be love spats. They became bitter quarrels. Two animals, searching for the throat hold.

They never saw each other straight again. The Thing Ruth Snyder strangled wasn't a man to her twisted vision. He had become a monster—a menace—

Hate does that to us.

It did that to Ruth Snyder. It can do it to you.

Hate may never ripen into murder in your life—but it can ripen into the first steps toward murder. It can strangle love, even though it may never squeeze the breath from the human throat.

Hate is always the seed of death.

DON'T SOW THE FIRST LITTLE SEED!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

TOMORROW will be shining, tomorrow will be bright, Its hours will hold all lovely things that fashion heart's delight. No shadows there will linger, but, ever sweet and gay, tomorrow will be f'ted with the dreams we dream today. For we are ever weaving the fabric of the years, we make it bright with laughter, we make it drab with tears. We flood it with the sunbeams of hope's celestial rays, we lend to it the glamour of youth's enchanted ways. And all fair thoughts we garner the while we journey on will be glad memories to grace tomorrow's golden dawn. We need not doubt nor dread it, the time that is to be; we need not fear to fathom its hidden mystery. For each shapes his tomorrow in pattern grave or gay with all the dreams and all the deeds he dreams and does today!
